FROM WASHINGTON.

Removal of Captain Meigs—The San Juan Question—Slogan Dispatches—Wait of an American Ship to Tunis.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 7.

The cause of the removal of Captain MEIGS from the Superintendency of Public Buildings by the Secretary of War, was a difference of opinion between them as to the payment of certain claims, Captain MEIGS refusing payment because the vouchers were informal, and the Secretary of War ordering that the claims should be satisfied, as he knew them to be just. This, however, was but one cause among many which determined the result.

The San Juan issue between this Government and England remains as stated in my dispatch a fortnight since. It is for England to make the next move. The rejoinder to the reply of Gen. CASS declining to surrender the Island, is looked for with great interest, and Mr. BUCHANAN will postpone any intimation in his message to the nature of the reply until the rejoinder is received.

It is understood that fabricated dispatches have been sent to some of the New-York papers this evening, with the view of influencing the election to-morrow.

The Secretary of War is busily preparing his estimates for the Annual Report.

(FROM OUR REPORTER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 7, 1859.

Capt. LAVALETTE, in a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, dated Naples, Oct. 14, says that he had taken the American Consul, Mr. NICHOLSON, to Tunis in the steamship Wabash. It was customary to salute the English and French Consuls whenever they arrived or departed, but no other such officers were similarly honored; but since our treaty with Tunis placed our Consuls on a footing equal with those of the most favored nations, and this fact having been explained, the authorities cheerfully accorded the salute to both Capt. LAVALETTE and Consul NICHOLSON. The carriages of the Bey were in waiting at the landing, where our officers were received by persons of the highest rank, and escorted to the palace. The interview was very satisfactory, the Bey saying that he should endeavor to cultivate the most friendly relations with the United States. Capt. LAVALETTE adds: "I clearly discovered that our presence was having a beneficial effect on the new Government, especially with reference to the position of our Consul. I am satisfied that the short trip to Tunis will conduce to the best interests of the United States. Senator GWIN will, at the earliest period of next session of Congress, bring forward the Pacific Railroad question with more than his usual energy.

Siege of Brownsville.

DEFEAT OF THE TOWN-PEOPLE BY CORTINAS—PROBABLE SURRENDER OF THE PLACE TO THE MAURADERS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Nov. 7.

The steamship Arizona, from Brownsville, Texas, on the 2d inst., has arrived here.

CORTINAS and his band continue their depredations, threatening the inhabitants with fire and sword. On the 26th ult. thirty men entered the city and fired one round, when they were surprised by the artillery, and fled. On the 24th a hundred and twenty men, with cannon and howitzers, marched against CORTINAS, and drove the guard from his house. They subsequently were surprised by an ambuscade, and lost a cannon and many men. The City was barricaded and trenches dug for defence. An attack was hourly expected.

It was reported that after taking Brownsville, CORTINAS would attack Brazos. The Mayor of Brownsville appeal to New-Orleans for a hundred men, as their citizens are worn out and the Rangers had not arrived from Northern Mexico. Sixty felons, released from the prison at Victoria, had joined the guerilla band and were devastating the country.

From the Pacific Coast.

PREPARATIONS TO RECEIVE GEN. SCOTT—FAILURE OF THE SALT LAKE MAIL ANTICIPATED—ADVICES FROM OREGON AND BRITISH COLUMBIA.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Nov. 7.

The Overland Mail with San Francisco dates of the 14th ult. arrived last night.

Great preparations were making to receive Gen. SCOTT. All the military companies and soldiers in the Mexican war would meet him on his arrival and escort him through the city, where all classes of the people were preparing to pay him their tribute of respect.

The creditors of CHORPENNING & Co., mail contractors between California and Salt Lake, had attached their stock and other property for debts amounting to $30,000. It was feared that the mails would be suspended from this cause.

The water courses throughout the State were at the lowest stage, and the miners holding claims in the beds of the streams were gathering rich harvests of gold.

Oregon dates are to Oct. 8. Five hundred and fifty emigrant wagons had arrived at the Cascades, Washington Territory.

Advices from Capt. WALLEN's Salt Lake expedition and Lieut. MULLER's Fort Benton Wagon-road expedition announce the good health and continued prosperity of the commands. Capt. WALLEN had rendered great service to the emigrants on the route. The Indians were quiet.

British Columbia dates are to Oct. 10. Everything was quiet at San Juan. The British Colonist says it was currently reported that a new Governor named Douglas may be shortly expected.

The shipments of Gold from Victoria in September amounted to $110,000.

The miners on Fraser's River were doing well.

Business at San Francisco was slow. There was little doing from first hands except by auction. Sales of India goods that way were quite heavy. Provisions were drooping. Crushed sugar was 11c. ⅌ lb. Coffee was more buoyant. Candles were inactive. Domestic spirits were firmer. Spirits turpentine was $1 ⅌ gallon.

From New-Mexico.

INDIAN DEPREDATIONS—BATTLE AT THE DEL NORTE.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Nov. 7.

The New-Mexican Mail of the 26th September, arrived last night via El Paso and the Overland Mail coach, the northern route having been abandoned in consequence of Indian outrages along the line. The passengers and letters report the continuance of depredations and murder on the plains by the Indians.

A letter from Taos, New-Mexico, to the Republican, mentions a battle between the Utah Indians, assisted by Mexicans, and a band of Arrapahoes at the crossing of the Del Norte, in which twenty-two of the latter were killed.

From St. Helena.

CAPTURE OF TWO SLAVERS.

BOSTON, Monday, Nov. 7.

The ship Peerless, from Calcutta, via St. Helena, has arrived at this port, bringing dates from the latter port of Sept. 12. There were no American vessels in port. Two slavers, taken on the coast of Africa by a British cruiser were in port, and with their cargoes, had been condemned by the Admiralty Court. The name of one was unknown; the other was the Stephen H. Townsend, Capt. WILKES, of New-Orleans. P. CALVERLY CLAUGHTON, Bishop of St. Helena, was expected to arrive in November from England.

Disaster on Lake Erie.

EXPLOSION OF THE PROPELLER OHIO—TWO LIVES LOST.

SANDUSKY, Monday, Nov. 7.

Propeller Ohio, bound to Buffalo from Cleveland, with a cargo of 350 tons merchandise, when ten miles off Long Point below Erie, Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, blew up, and sank in ten minutes. There were seventeen persons aboard, of whom THOMAS [illegible], second mate, and MICHAEL DARIGAN, wheelman, were lost. The remaining fifteen persons drifted in a yawl-boat, without oars, in a high sea, with little clothing, fifteen hours, when the propellor Equator picked them up and brought them to this port. The Ohio was owned by the American Transportation Company. It is said that there is no insurance.

Louisiana Election.

RESULT OF THE VOTE IN NEW-ORLEANS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, Nov. 7.

The election here, to-day, passed off quietly. In the Fourth District the Democrats have elected one member of the Legislature, one Justice of the Peace, and one State Tax-Collector. In the rest of the city, the regular American ticket is elected by a large majority.

The New-York Forgers in Boston.

BOSTON, Monday, Nov. 7.

LEACH and BISHOP, charged with forgery on Mr. ROBERT BONNER, are to be taken to New-York for trial, on a requisition of Gov. MORGAN. There is also a requisition for them from the Governor of Pennsylvania.

Presidency of the Georgia University.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Monday, Nov. 7.

HENRY R. JACKSON has been elected President of the Georgia University.

THE VIRGINIA REBELLION.

Additions to the Documentary History.

LYDIA MARIA CHILD AND GOV. WISE.

In his Brooklyn speech, Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS alluded to a correspondence which had passed between Mrs. LYDIA MARIA CHILD and Gov. WISE. The Richmond Enquirer, of Saturday, publishes this correspondence, as follows:

LETTER FROM MRS. CHILD TO GOV. WISE.

WAYLAND, Mass., Oct. 26, 1859.

GOV. WISE: I have heard that you were a man of chivalrous sentiments, and I know you were opposed to the iniquitous attempt to force upon Kansas a Constitution abhorrent to the moral sense of her people. Relying upon these indications of honor and justice in your character, I venture to ask a favor of you. Enclosed is a letter to Capt. JOHN BROWN. Will you have the kindness, after reading it yourself, to transmit it to the prisoner?

I, and all my large circle of Abolition acquaintances, were taken by surprise when news came of Capt. BROWN's recent attempt; nor do I know of a single person who would have approved of it had they been apprised of his intentions. But I, and thousands of others, feel a natural impulse of sympathy for the brave and suffering man. Perhaps God, who sees the inmost of our souls, perceives some such sentiment in your heart also. He needs mother or sister to dress his wounds and speak soothingly to him. Will you allow me to perform that mission of humanity? If you will, may God bless you for the generous deed!

I have been for years an uncompromising Abolitionist, and I should scorn to deny it, or apologize for it, as much as JOHN BROWN himself would do. Believing in peace principles, I deeply regret the step that the old veteran has taken, while I honor his humanity toward those who became his prisoners. But, because it is my habit to be as open as the daylight, I will also say, that if I believed our religion justified men in fighting for freedom, I should consider the enslaved everywhere as best entitled to that right. Such an avowal is a simple, frank expression of my sense of natural justice. But I should despise myself utterly if any circumstances could tempt me to seek to advance these opinions, in any way, directly or indirectly, after your permission to visit Virginia had been obtained on the plea of sisterly sympathy with a brave and suffering man. I give you my word of honor, which was never broken, that I would use such permission solely and singly for the purpose of nursing your prisoner, and for no other purpose whatsoever.

Yours, respectfully,
L. MARIA CHILD.

LETTER FROM MRS. CHILD TO JOHN BROWN.

WAYLAND, Mass., Oct. 26, 1859.

DEAR CAPT. BROWN: Though personally unknown to you, you will recognize in my name an earnest friend of Kansas, when circumstances made that Territory the battle-ground between the antagonistic principles of Slavery and Freedom, which politicians so vainly strive to reconcile in the Government of the United States.

Believing in peace principles, I cannot sympathize with the method you chose to advance the cause of Freedom. But I honor your generous intentions. I thousands of hearts are throbbing with sympathy as warm as mine. I think of you night and day, bleeding in prison, surrounded by hostile faces, sustained only by trust in God, and your own strong heart. I long to nurse you, to speak to you sisterly words of sympathy and consolation. I have asked permission of Gov. WISE to do so. If the request is not granted I cherish the hope that these few words may at least reach your hands, and afford you some little solace. May you be strengthened by the conviction that no honest man never sheds blood for freedom in vain, however much he may be mistaken in his efforts. May God sustain you, and carry you through whatsoever may be in store for you.

Yours, with heartfelt respect, sympathy and affection.
L. MARIA CHILD.

GOV. WISE'S REPLY TO MRS. CHILD.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29, 1859.

MADAM: Yours of the 26th was received by me yesterday, and at my earliest leisure I respectfully reply to it, that I will forward the letter for JOHN BROWN, a prisoner under our laws, arraigned at the bar of the Circuit Court for the County of Jefferson, at Charlestown, Va., for the crimes of murder, robbery and treason, which you ask me to transmit to him. I will comply with your request, in the only way which seems to me proper, by inclosing it to the Commonwealth's Attorney, with the request that he will ask the permission of the Court to hand it to the prisoner. Brown, the prisoner, is now in the hands of the Judiciary, not of the Executive, of this Commonwealth. You ask me further to allow you to perform the mission "of mother or sister, to dress his wounds and speak soothingly to him." By this, of course, you mean to be allowed to visit him in his cell, and to minister to him in the offices of humanity. Why should you not be so allowed, Madam? Virginia and Massachusetts are involved in no civil war, and the Constitution which unites them in one Confederacy, guarantees to you the privileges and immunities of a citizen of the United States in the State of Virginia. That Constitution I am sworn to support, and am, therefore, bound to protect your privileges and immunities as a citizen of Massachusetts coming into Virginia for any lawful and peaceful purpose. Coming, as you propose, to minister to the captive in prison, you will be met, doubtless, by all our people, not only in a chivalrous but in a Christian spirit. You have a right to visit Charlestown, Va., Madam, and your mission, being merciful and humane, will not only be allowed but be respected if not welcomed. A few, unenlightened and inconsiderate persons, fanatical in their modes of thought and action to maintain justice and right, might molest you, or be disposed to do so, and and this might suggest the imprudence of risking any experiment upon the peace of a society very much excited by the crimes with whose chief author you seem to sympathise so much; but still, I repeat, your motives and avowed purpose are lawful and peaceful, and I will, as far as I am concerned, do my duty in protecting your rights in our limits. Virginia and her authorities would be weak indeed—weak in point of folly and weak in point of power—if her State faith and constitutional obligations cannot be redeemed in her own limits to the letter of morality as well as of law, and if her chivalry cannot courteously receive a lady's visit to a prisoner. Every arm which guards BROWN from rescue on the one hand, and from lynch law on the other, will be ready to guard your person in Virginia. I could not permit an insult even to woman in her walk of charity among us, though it be to one who whetted knives of butchery for our "mothers, sisters," daughters and babes. We have no sympathy with your sentiments of sympathy with BROWN, and are surprised that you were "taken by surprise when news came of Capt. BROWN's recent attempt." His attempt was a natural consequence of your sympathy, and the error of that sympathy ought to make you doubt its virtue, from the effect on his conduct. But it is not of this I should speak. When you arrive at Charlestown, if you go there, it will be for the Court and its officers, the Commonwealth's attorney, sheriff and jailor, to say whether you may see and wait on the prisoner. But, whether you are thus permitted or not, (and you will be, if my advice prevail,) you may rest assured that he will be humanely, lawfully and mercifully dealt by, in prison and on trial.

Respectfully, HENRY A. WISE.

To L. MARIA CHILD.

THE HARPER'S FERRY INSURRECTION.

LECTURE BY REV. J. SELLA MARTIN.

The Bethesda (colored) Presbyterian Church, in Sullivan-street, was crowded last night on the occasion of the delivery of a lecture on the late insurrection, by Rev. J. SELLA MARTIN. The lecturer said that our nation was passing through a crisis, such as had not often been seen in history, and that New-York was not the place to withhold the expression of sympathy for poor, down-trodden Africa. This was the time for candid words, spoken not in recrimination, but in justice and mercy. The first lesson to be learned from the affair at Harper's Ferry, was that a colored man is just like a white man, no better and no worse for being black. It had been said that the negroes were cowards; that they were sleek, greasy and happy, and, next to the devil, hated the Abolitionists. The reason of this was that the slaves had been so often fooled that they could not but regard white men with suspicion. The impracticability of JOHN BROWN's plan was enough to justify cowardice. He made a great mistake in holding as prisoners the slaves of Col. WASHINGTON. If it was true that the slaves were contented, then he asked for no stronger condemnation of the system of bondage, than that it crushed out the intuitive love of liberty. A second lesson of this insurrection was that the colored men had learned so much of their oppressors, that no white man will ever be able to commend himself to their confidence. Though he honored the name and memory of Old JOHN BROWN, he would have it understood that cooperation with a white man was impossible. The third lesson was that white and black people get along pretty well together. He liked the white folks as being between the two races; they were like the fly-leaf between the Old and New Testaments, that did not belong to either Dispensation. When he saw amalgamation, he thought the logic of the white people was good, but their conclusion very bad. If white women have superior judgment, why should fault be found with them for marrying black men? If they were foolish, there would be two fools together, and that would do them no harm. If they were maniacs, then nothing would do them so much good as the sight of a black picture. A fourth lesson taught by this affair was that the black man was possessed of courage. People had harped so much upon the timidity of the negroes that they had almost come to believe it to be a fact.

The fifth lesson to be learned was that the white men were more interested in the Anti-Slavery cause than they had been thought to be. He did not give them credit for genuine philanthropy, but that slave labor was touching their pockets. It prevented them from sending their mowing machines and their books to the South. He looked for the time when there would be a negro nationality in this country. Every slave brought from Africa would be a sword in the hand of Providence to carve out the destiny of this Republic. The negroes were to occupy the places now occupied by white men. The colored men had learned, as a sixth lesson, that their best friends were not their best friends after all. Under this head Mr. MARTIN censured FRED. DOUGLAS for having been so eloquent in their behalf, and when the crisis came, for writing letters from the broad latitude of Canada West. This brought out a good deal of hissing on the part of the audience, but loud applause soon drowned it. The last lesson, he considered to be that the insurrection had aroused the colored men to feel that they had something to do. After enlarging somewhat on this head, the lecturer closed with an appeal to the colored people of New-York to train up their children in the love of Freedom. He received loud applause when he retired.

THE BACKER OF JOHN BROWN.

From the Louisville Journal.

Dr. SAMUEL G. HOWE, of Boston, is a peculiar and very remarkable man. We first knew him nearly forty years ago as a student in Brown University at Providence, Rhode Island. We presume that traditions of his career as a student are still preserved and related in the University. He was quick and bright and talented, but, probably the wildest and most inveterately mischievous young man ever connected with the institution. There was scarcely any kind of mischief which he did not habitually practice. If any petty prank or even gross outrage was perpetrated within the college precincts or in the vicinity, the general sentiment uniformly and at once settled upon him as its author. He was, to use a rather low word, full of all manner of "deviltry." He was continually summoned before the faculty and publicly admonished and fined and rusticated, and suspended, and the constant expectation of all was that he would be expelled. Still he remained throughout his four years and graduated—we think in the class of 1823—though without honor.

We suppose that nobody who knew SAMUEL G. HOWE or knew of him in college had the slightest expectation that he would ever come to good. We remember to have heard with a feeling of utter surprise, a few months after he graduated, that he was studying with the utmost industry in the office of Dr. INGALLS, a distinguished physician and surgeon of Boston, with every prospect of becoming able and distinguished in the profession he had chosen. He remained with Dr. INGALLS, we believe, until he was admitted to practice, and all who knew him regarded him then as certain to win professional distinction. He carried into the pursuits of science the same spirit and energy that in his previous years he had manifested in vexing and annoying and injuring all around him.

But Dr. HOWE was at that time too impulsive, he had in his soul too much of the spirit of wild and reckless and desperate adventure, to be able to settle calmly down in the practice of a peaceable profession in New-England when stirring events, that could touch the heart of a bold and generous man, were taking place in any part of the world. The Greek revolution had at that time broken out, and the Greeks, rousing themselves from their old and hereditary slumber, were striking manfully for independence. The odds against them were terrible, and their cause was desperate, but there were enough the circumstances to kindle the ardor and enlist the action of Dr. HOWE. With whatever means he could command in men and money he hastened to Greece, and he bore himself throughout all her war that his name is yet mentioned and blessed by her sons as that of one of her noblest and best and most devoted benefactors. He encountered every peril, and did more than any other man to prevent and relieve the sufferings of the Grecian soldiers and people.

Dr. HOWE's career since his return from Greece to the United States is probably better known to thousands of others throughout the country than it is to us. For many years he has been the Superintendent of the Massachusetts Asylum for the Blind, and unquestionably he has made that institution the admiration of the public and the model of all similar institutions throughout our land. He has devoted to it all the powers of a fine intellect and a great and most enthusiastic heart. He has accomplished for the blind what was never accomplished before, and what, but for him, might not perhaps have been accomplished for half a century to come. And he has not confined his exertions to that noble enterprise alone. In all the great and numerous public benefactions of Massachusetts, he has borne an important and leading part. He has been one of the first men looked to, and one of the chief men relied on, whenever any great thing was to be undertaken for the relief of any class of suffering humanity in his native State or for the promotion of her welfare and her fame.

Dr. HOWE has always been a Free-Soiler, and, we believe, an ultra Abolitionist. From our knowledge of his character and history, however, we are constrained to regard him as sincere and honest in whatever he says or does. He was ever from his boyhood an enthusiast for freedom, and the perversion of this feeling or sentiment in his bosom has no doubt made him what he is toward Slavery and slaveholders. If it is true, as it certainly appears to be, that he gave his countenance to the conspiracy for fomenting rebellion throughout the Southern States, he should, whatever his merits in other respects may be, be execrated by the present generation and by posterity. But if, as we can scarcely hope, he is innocent of the great crime, we shall most heartily rejoice in being able to proclaim his innocence.

BROWN'S FAMILY.

The Worcester (Mass.) Spy, Nov. 4, says:

"Rev. T. W. HIGGINSON, of this city, has just returned from a visit to the family of Capt. JOHN BROWN. He found them up among the Adirondac mountains in New-York, near Lake Champlain, opposite Burlington, Vt.—Mrs. BROWN and four of her surviving children, three daughters and one son. She is a second wife, and has been the mother of 12 children. BROWN had eight children by a previous wife, making 20 in all. Eight of the 20 are now living. Mrs. BROWN was accompanied by Mr. HIGGINSON, on his return, and he went with her in the train to Boston, yesterday, passing through Fitchburgh. She will leave to-day for Virginia, having telegraphed to Gov. WISE for permission to visit her husband in prison."

Sporting News.

GRANTLEY BERKELEY'S BUFFALO HUNT.

A Westport correspondent of the St. Louis Republican writes, Oct. 31:

"GRANTLEY BERKELEY set out from here on the 25th of September (Sunday) for a big buffalo hunt on the great plains. The sporting world will probably be gratified to learn that he and his party have got safely back, after a pleasant and successful sport of a little over one month. They arrived in the "settlements" on the 29th inst., and the party divided—the nobleman and a portion of his suite going on to St. Joseph, and the guide and generalissimo of the excursion, JOHN CANTRELL, and the balance of the party coming on to Westport. I learn from one of the company that the hunt turned out very well, and to the perfect satisfaction of "My Lord," who thinks himself amply repaid for all his trouble and expenditures. They started out on the Santa Fé route until they heard of the Indian depredations, when, by advice of CANTRELL, they changed their course further north. They proceeded to Fort Riley, where they were joined by two officers of the Army, and thus recruited, made for the region of Smoky Hill Fork, (some 250 miles from Missouri river,) where they were gratified with the sight of buffalo in abundance. During the first day's hunt our high-born Englishman made a dead failure—he had the "buck ague" to an alarming extent, and missed fire every time, but he daily improved, and soon showed himself a good hunter and fair sportsman—for a foreigner. They killed twenty-nine noble buffalo, the skins and tongues of which will be carried across the waters as trophies, and a few choice steaks carefully packed up to grace a London Club dinner about Christmas time. They also killed a variety of smaller game, at which "My Lord" seemed more at home. When it came to feathered game, birds on the wing, &c., he surpassed every one else. His fondness for sport is only equaled by his energy and endurance. CANTRELL says that the old Englishman can hunt, on foot or on horseback, without eating or drinking.

Mr. BERKELEY delivered a lecture in St. Joseph on Tuesday, Oct. 25, to the great satisfaction and delight of a large audience.

SUPERINTENDENT PILSBURY'S INSTRUCTIONS TO POLICEMEN AND POLL-CLERKS.

Superintendent PILSBURY has issued a series of instructions to Policemen and Poll-Clerks relative to their duties to-day.

It will be the duty of the captain or acting captain in each Precinct of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, to see that at the opening of the poll the ballot-boxes are punctually presented to the Inspectors of Election, and that the two detailed Policemen are properly posted—one at the place of poll entrance, and the other at the place of poll exit—and to see that no booth or box from whence tickets are distributed shall be erected or maintained within one hundred and fifty feet of the place of poll.

It will be the duty of the Police to repress, at the outset, all indications of violence and outrage about the polls. It is a grave misdemeanor for any one to assault any "elector" or any Policeman, and for any officer to neglect to make an arrest for an offence committed in his presence.

The Captains will see that (in addition to the two Policemen especially detailed to each poll) there is one patrolman constantly and vigilantly on patrol, in the immediate neighborhood of the poll, and that a competent day and night reserve is kept in the Station-house.

The canvassing of the votes is conducted in public, and at the place of the poll. The Police and Patrol will see that this provision of law is fulfilled, and whilst every one is admitted to sight and hearing of the canvass, that the strictest order is maintained by the bystanders.

The Police will request individuals who have voted not to obstruct the approach of those desiring to vote, but will see that the spectators and challengers of the voting have reasonable privileges compatible with the size of the poll-room.

It will be the duty of the Poll-Clerks to be present at the opening of the poll, and receive the constitutional oath of office from the Chairman of the Board of Inspectors.

During the day the particular duties of the Poll-Clerks will be to enter the name of each voter in the poll-book, his place of residence and the number of tickets and the kind which he votes; and also to keep the minutes of the challenges. It is advisable also to write as minutes accompanying the challenging of any doubtful voter, a short digest of what occurred in relation to the same. The Poll-Clerks will also make out for the Inspectors all precepts, warrants and requisitions that are necessary.

During the canvass, the appropriate duty of the Clerks will be found, if required, in assisting to keep the tally—to overlook the reading and count of the canvassers as to the ballots—to paste to each return every ballot rejected as defective, although there should be an hundred alike, so as to allow the County Canvassers to see them, and a copy of each kind of ticket voted; to fill up the returns, and to see that numbers are written, and not made in numerals; and to see that the provision of law is strictly complied with, that the return of each box should be signed, not only of an original return, but of a copy—one to file and one to leave with Supervisor—sealed in a strong wrapper and countersigned across the seal by each District Canvasser before the next box is proceeded to. As one Clerk can be making a duplicate at the same time another is perfecting the original, the statement and copy can be each perfected together. It will thus become as short to make two originals.

These returns might be accompanied on the wrapper by the signatures of the Poll-Clerks; and certainly no Canvasser could object to this additional formality, and the returns are not to be opened by either County Clerk or Supervisor until the meeting of the Board of County Canvassers.

All persons but Canvassers and Poll-Clerks are prohibited from engaging in or assisting in the count of the votes.

THE CATTARAUGUS SHERIFFALTY.

GOV. MORGAN AND THE SECRETARY OF STATE

Some days since we noticed an application made to Gov. MORGAN by Mr. TUCKER, Secretary of State for the removal of Sheriff GREGORY, of Cattaraugus County, on charges of neglect of duty. On the 31st October, the Governor, through his private Secretary, intimated to Mr. TUCKER that the charges against Mr. GREGORY had been examined, but that no cause for removal was apparent, and the complaint, therefore had been dismissed. Under date of Nov. 4, Mr. TUCKER addressed a protest to the Governor, in which the following passage occurred:

"I protest against this dismissal of my charge, because your Excellency has thereby virtually decided that a Sheriff has the right, in his pleasure and at his discretion, to mutilate a General Election Notice issued by me, and thus to usurp the functions of Secretary of State, and to change the language and character of a public document. You have at least decided that you will not remove him from office for such a grave offence."

Mr. TUCKER adds:

"I respectfully submit and protest that it was not for your Excellency to inquire what the notice contained, but to be satisfied whether the Sheriff had published it as I had sent it to him; inasmuch as your Excellency has jurisdiction over the Sheriff but not over the Secretary of State, and inasmuch as no Sheriff nor even a Governor is given, by the laws of this State, any power or authority with respect to the framing or drawing up of a General Election Notice, or deciding what shall be contained therein. Your Excellency will remember that the Secretary of State is exclusively charged with this duty, and is responsible only to the courts of law for its proper discharge.

All which I have the honor most respectfully to submit, remaining,

Your Excellency's obedient servant,
GIDEON J. TUCKER.

OHIO ELECTION—OFFICIAL RETURNS.

The following are the footings of the official returns of the Ohio Election:

Governor—Dennison, 184,503; Bonney, 171,268; majority for Dennison (Rep.), 13,235.

Lieutenant-Governor—Kirk, 185,534; Safford, 170,867; majority for Kirk (Rep.), 14,667.

Secretary of State—Russell, 184,838; Reinhard, 170,409; majority for Russell (Rep.), 14,429.

Supreme Judge—Gholson, 186,088; Whitman, 170,595; majority for Gholson (Rep.), 15,493.

The total vote is a large one—355,768—being ten thousand over the vote of last year. It, however, falls short 30,884 votes of the Presidential vote of 1856.

ERROR IN THE NAME OF A CANDIDATE.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Nov. 7, 1859.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will you please correct the error in your issue of this morning in relation to my name. I have no middle letter "E."

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM NORTON,
Union nominee for Senator First Sen. District.

THE CASE OF MRS. DUDLEY.

Proceedings in Court to Test the Lady's Sanity.

A telegram from Albany has already announced the appointment of a Commission, by order of the Supreme Court, to decide the question of the sanity of Mrs. BLANDINA DUDLEY. The Albany Argus publishes the petition and affidavit upon which the proceedings were taken.

The petition, which is signed and sworn to by SARAH B. TERRY, of Troy, sets forth that Mrs. DUDLEY is now of the age of seventy-five years, and is, from her advanced age and the infirmities incident thereto, so far deprived of her reason and understanding that she is rendered altogether unfit and unable to govern herself or to manage her affairs; and prays that a commission, in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquiremdo, may issue to inquire of the lunacy of the said BLANDINA DUDLEY, and of her capacity to govern herself and manage her affairs, directed to such persons as to this Court shall seem meet.

Annexed to the petition is an affidavit of GEORGE TAYLOR, of Rensselaer County, who swears—

"That he has known the petitioner; that for many years he has been intimately acquainted with her; and that, according to his best judgment, he believes that she is now, and has been for several years last past, of unsound mind and understanding, and incapable of governing herself and managing her affairs; that deponent has been to a considerable extent acquainted with the property and business affairs of the said Blandina Dudley, and has had occasion recently to investigate her condition; that as near as he can ascertain, and as he believes the truth to be, the said Blandina Dudley three years ago was possessed of an estate in real and personal property to the value of about $600,000, which, since that time, has been reduced to less than $250,000; that, as he has been informed and believes, the said Blandina Dudley some two years ago, made her last will and testament; that during the past Spring she made absolute conveyance of

was a source of great comfort to more than one of us during our 48 hours of tempest.

On Wednesday we had made 270 miles. The sea did not go down perceptibly till night, a heavy squall at noon eking it out to the last. The evening was the first really cold one; we have had on the trip. In so far we were really fortunate. On Thursday there was no observation. During the forenoon it began to snow, and before night we were in our old position again before a stiff northwester, the weather being so thick with snow and spray that we could hardly see two ship's lengths ahead. Since we were at this time just off Cape Race, in the very track of the Saturday's eastward bound steamers, the perils of collision were a new terror to the fleld. But our line ship boomed along, as it or its kind, without accident. We were pretty sure that, if we struck anything head on, our 25 feet stem-post in the bows would not injure us at least. At evening one of the minor stay-bolts connected with the engine parted, and the speed was a little reduced while the very slight damage was repaired. The night was very squally and uncomfortable, banishing sleep.

On Friday, an observation showed that we had made 300 miles during the past two days—an excellent run. All day long we had a succession of very severe northwesterly squalls, making a heavy, straining sea. The captain did not despair of good weather some time, however, as he believed they had "got nearly out of materials" for many more storms. During the night, the sea went down, and Saturday was our first comfortable day. Though too cloudy for an observation, it offered a most welcome opportunity for promenading, which was eagerly embraced by the passengers, after a week of closed ports and foul air. Our company embraces not only senators and judges, in fact, but an army of them in embryo—their mothers say—to wit: the biggest nursery full of children one ever did see, and so beautifully behaved withal.

Sunday was really delightful, with a fresh north wind, which we improved with all our canvas, and a glorious sunshine which reminds one of a Christian country. Even yet a few of our ladies were too ill to leave their rooms. The observation to-day showed a run of 303 miles; that of yesterday was 296 by dead reckoning. At 12 o'clock we were 200 miles from Sandy Hook, and the propitious elements procure us a view of New-York Harbor at noon to-morrow—a fact productive of the most hearty congratulations among our ocean-tried company.

Our officers, who have stood up bravely to our almost unceasing storm, tell us that this has been the most uncomfortable passage within their recollection. Our two days' gale, though severe, is often outstripped in severity on this most stormy of oceans.

However much may be justly said in favor of the Vanderbilt's sea-worthy qualities, her comforts could be summed up in fewer words. I am quite sure that travelers who are familiar with the Collins and Cunard ships will agree that this noble vessel is uncomfortably appointed, especially in the matter of ventilation. The saloon on the main-deck, instead of being a sitting and dining-room, opening directly to the fresh air, is merely a cheerless sitting apartment, surrounded with staterooms, which during a rough passage are not conducive to good ventilation. And below this saloon and the main-deck, is the large and well-furnished, but dark and cheerless dining-room. After a week of closed port-holes and windows, its aroma does not strongly suggest the Sabean odors of Araby the Blest. Had the space been devoted to staterooms, like the Cunarders, with several large ventilators like the Adriatic's, leading to the deck, the ship would have been as comfortable as it is safe. There is something cosy and cheerful about the old Canada, for instance, and ships of her class, that quite overbalance the other good parts of the Vanderbilt.

The attendance and cleanliness of the ship are susceptible of the greatest improvement. There is no excuse for using dirty table-linen, for instance, when the cost of the remedy would be hardly perceptible. The table, however, was generally as good as should be asked for. The promenade decks, when washed, instead of being dried by swabs, remain too wet for comfortable locomotion till late in the morning. Some of the state-rooms look badly. All these little annoyances will justly drive away custom from the ship as long as they are tolerated.

Much has been said about the excessive rolling of the Vanderbilt, by reason of the "top-hamper" of her beam-engines; the heavy walking-beams, weighing twenty-five tons each, being high above the deck. The fact is, however, that they ease the roll of the ship, a very necessary feature in side-wheel steamers, which are lightly sparred, and whose masts cannot, therefore, produce this desirable result. And I never saw a vessel roll less, save when she is extremely light. In any case the beam-engines possess the great economical advantage of long stroke over the side levers of the Cunard ships, and, next to the oscillating engine, is undoubtedly the best sort for paddle-ships. The Vanderbilt certainly has a pair of engines which are a credit to the machinists of any country. Their stability and smoothness of operation is only exceeded by that of the Great Eastern's paddle-engines.

The number of excursionists to Europe is now so hugely increasing, and the discomforts of North Atlantic voyages are becoming so thoroughly understood, that a class of fast and luxurious vessels, far exceeding our present ideas on the subject, will soon be imperatively demanded. A greater length—not mainly a much greater width—will insure steadiness, and enable us to perfect models, which is the head and front of improvement as to speed. The idea of screws and high steam for passage-ships may be scouted now. But we shall see one of these days. Above all, we shall have safety. I believe that if a census of civilized countries were taken to-day, with reference to this matter, it would show that one-half the people are positively afraid to make an ocean voyage. On the whole they are right. Perfect security against fire, tempest and waves, and against loss of life by collision and stranding, are possible and will be demanded. Explosions may occur, but even now they are rare on ocean ships.

For present purposes, however, particularly in the matter of safety, I strongly recommend the Vanderbilt to the sea-going public. TUBAL CAIN.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

Disturbances of the Entente Cordiale—Most Important Semi-Official Article from the French Government.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1859.

New difficulties seem to be growing up between the French and English Governments, and we again hear on all sides expressions in fear of a war. The late speeches and newspaper articles in England have excited a general indignation in France, such as we have not seen since the trial of Dr. BERNARD. The following article, sent from the Cabinet of one of the Ministers, to be published simultaneously in the departmental journals, looks very much like an attempt on the part of the French Government, to arouse in the breasts of the nation the old hatred of "perfidious Albion," and to prepare their minds for coming events. So far as I have observed, this Ministerial attempt at the shaping of public opinion has not been printed in any of the Paris papers. The following is the article in question:

"There are solemn hours in the existence of nations which decide for a long time their power and their destiny. It seems to us that England is on the eve of one of these critical moments. For some years past, this nation, which had become strong rather by diplomacy and industry than by force of arms, seems to have a consciousness of a gradual decline. She straitens herself up in vain. The virility with which she crushed Europe from 1815 till the glorious reestablishment of the Napoleonic dynasty, she no longer feels within her. Thus we see her to-day uneasy as to the present, still more uneasy as to what to-morrow is preparing for her; she seeks, full of jealous doubts, the route which will bring her back toward her former strength. From this proceed vacillations and weaknesses without number, which astonish the world and take statesmen themselves by surprise. England, formerly so decided and so precise, no longer knows her own mind. The memory of her traditions escapes her. Her chagrin absorbs it, and because she will not acknowledge her decline she sinks.

The present Government of France, Europe can testify, has never thought of profiting in a personal interest by this situation, but on the contrary has temporized in the most extended manner. In the Crimea, in China, and in the most of the great events of Europe, the Emperor NAPOLEON III. has always sought to place in common with the august sovereign of Great Britain his fortune and his glory, taking no care to know which of the two crowns gave to the other the most brilliant reflection. At the moment when the Italian question was passing from the domain of diplomacy into the critical order of facts, France still spared no efforts to remain united with her former ally, and to place her in a condition to share the honor of restoring to an entire people that measured independence and that fruitful order which magnify not only those who receive them, but those who give them. The world knows what response was made to these generous advances by the Tory Cabinet. France was obliged to accomplish alone the undertaking.

Later on, the British Ministry changed, and the new Administration seemed to give evidence of a better disposition toward our policy and the cause of Italian independence. After the victories of Magenta and Solferino, the Foreign Office proclaimed its sympathies with the adversaries of Austria, but hastened to add that the contending parties must leave to Europe the care of deciding how the difference must terminate. From that moment the Congress, or at least Council, of the great Powers, had no warmer partisan than the British Cabinet. After the signing of the preliminaries of peace at Villafranca, the attitude of England was the same, as it was also at the moment of the meeting of the Plenipotentiaries at Zurich. Only a few days back the journals which represent the views of Lord JOHN RUSSELL showed themselves unanimous in favor of establishing the necessity for Europe of making fruitful by a direct intervention all the innovations favorable to Italy which are found in the Convention signed at Zurich and designed to serve as an instrument of peace. And now, at the hour in which the official announcement is made that this instrument is ready to be placed under the eyes of the world, England seems no longer disposed to keep to her word. The Morning Post, at least, publishes two articles—one after the other—which give room for serious doubts on this subject.

We will not discuss prematurely this new act of tergiversation before knowing officially its character. It will be too painful to us to denounce the severe truth to our former ally, before she has furnished us the official proof of her new misdeeds. But if it be true that the language of the Morning Post is the expression of the sentiments of the Foreign Office, we can then only signalize the fatal abasement of a great State relegated hereafter from the first rank to that of a Power of the second order. We can only say to England that she is growing old, and that her Queen has nothing more to do than to acquiesce passively in the decrees which Europe may hereafter make, with or without her consent."

MALAKOFF.

STATE OF ITALY.

Col. Anviti—Political Unitarianism—Mazzini—A General View of the Italian Question.

From Our Italian Correspondent.

LUGANO, Monday, Oct. 17, 1859.

The excitement subsequent on the murder of ANVITI is somewhat subsiding. The Italians are mightily relieved to find that the English, and even the French Press, have judged the unfortunate event from its true point of view, and have not calumniated an entire people for the crime of a misguided portion in a single city. FARINI is proceeding with energetic vigor to discover the culprits. Fifty have been arrested on suspicion. RINOTTI has arrived with a strong reinforcement, and it is asserted that Piedmont has decided to send troops thither.

In addition to the details I sent you in my last letter concerning the wretched Colonel, it appears that the individuals arrested in 1852, for the supposed attempt on his life, were condemned without the slightest proof. ANVITI and a certain PIETRO CARINI were rivals for the hand of a certain LUISA * * *. CARINI was victorious. On the evening of the decision, ANVITI, standing at the door of a barber's shop, heard a pistol fired off near him, and caused CARINI to be arrested, and menaced the barber and his apprentices with torture and imprisonment, unless they affirmed that they had heard the shot and seen CARINI pass the door. They, on the contrary, declared that they had heard no shot, and had not seen CARINI during the evening. They were all imprisoned, but still persisted in their denial, while CARINI so clearly proved an alibi, that Col. HAZON, President of the Council of War, publicly declared his innocence. Meanwhile the barber and his friends were kept in separate cells, and one morning one of them, GIORGIO BARBIERI, the father of a large family, was found strangled on the floor of his cell. The other prisoners were advised to avoid a similar fate. One of them, on this, thought he had heard the shot, and had seen Carini fire the pistol; and CARINI, with two supposed accomplices, was condemned to death by the Auditor of War. The family appealed to the Duchess, laying before her the infamous facts. She simply wrote at the foot of the sentence, "Let it be executed," and CARINI was shot.

This is but one of the fiendish acts of the ex-Colonel. Let it be borne in mind, when the lamentable vengeance of the rabble of Parma is censured. Let it also be remembered that another wretch, guilty of crimes equal to those of ANVITI, was arrested by the people of Parma, shortly after the flight of the Duchess; that proofs of his attempt at restoration were found on him; that he was placed in the hands of the authorities, who allowed him to remain at large, on bail; and that he fled from the hands of justice, and thus escaped punishment. All these things must be borne in mind, and I think that the staunchest lovers of order will agree with me that MASSIMO D'AZEGLIO's words are harsh and unjust. Until the 5th of October, he writes, Italy could "lift up her head in the face of Europe and say: 'What nation, after 40 years of corrupting slavery, has been able to give proof like the Italians, of virtue, rare among people possessed of ancient and political liberty?' Italy, by her very name, could defy all the forces of her enemies, because these forces fell powerless before the voice of public opinion, which cried: 'Let no one touch Italy!' How the position is changed. Italy has her brow stained, and she must bow her head for shame. Now she is no longer inviolate." No! Italy can lift her brow still proudly, for she will render justice even to the murderers of ANVITI.

The Unitarian Italian Association, which is exciting considerable attention, it being known that many literary men, together with the most intelligent and patriotic youths of Lombardy, are among its members, has just published its programme. The aim of the Society is "to aid the realization of the autonomy, unification and liberty of Italy." Its fundamental principles in POLITICS are the "exclusion of all foreign rule or influence; the union of the entire nation under one common administration; the abolition of all privileges; the extension of the elective principle; efficacious guarantees of the right of association, of petition, of personal liberty, and liberty of conscience. In civil administration it aims at legislative reform and THE EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN. Also, judicial, educational, industrial, commercial, financial reform. Concerning public defence it aims to develop all the military forces of the nation, to see the army disciplined according to the principles of equality and justice, until the fraternal alliance of the people shall permit the abolition of standing armies. This programme has called forth the approbation of the progressive organs of the Press, and various sneers and reproaches from the upholders of the status quo.

The Independente and the Staffetta, of Turin, complain loudly that the Society makes no mention of the King of Piedmont; to which attack one of the members replies, "that the Society intends to further the Government in the great work it has undertaken, and that all its members are so eminently Italian as to exclude the doubt of its strength being directed to build up the national edifice in the manner that the Italians desire on the corner-stone laid by the King of Piedmont, who has found out the way to conciliate all patriots, to silence the voice of parties, simply because he has shown himself an Italian Prince." At first sight one might say, Well, there is nothing new in all this; and, indeed, there is nothing new, only it is important that Europe, and especially the King of Piedmont and his Ministers, should know that precisely those Provinces who have acquired their liberty and independence feel that their situation is precarious, their position untenable, unless the whole of Italy be united and share the same benefits with themselves. Never have the destinies of a nation been so completely in the power of one man. The Italians are bent on unity; and it is in the hope that VICTOR EMANUEL, accepting the Provinces already offered, and if not helping, not hindering the movement of the two Sicilies in the same direction, is honest in his intentions to accomplish that unity, that the entire nation awaits his signal. Let him fail, let him take one single backward step, and he will see that the people will proceed towards that unity without him.

In Bologna, Florence, Modena, Parma, Genoa and Milan the workingmen are forming themselves into Societies, entitled the UNITARIAN LEAGUE; they are flocking to arms around GARIBALDI and FANTI. They are swelling by their miles the subscriptions for muskets for the equipment of the volunteers for the Venetian emigration, and all their words and actions prove that they are willing to make any sacrifice for any length of time, so that the national sword be not replaced in its scabbard until Italy, from Sicily to the Alps, from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic, be ONE and independent. Touching this accusation of the Turin papers, a member of the ASSOCIATION in Milan said to me, "All that ought to be said in reply is—with the King thankfully, if we can; without him, sorrowfully if we must."

Another title of accusation against the Society is its audacious desire for the emancipation of women. "The clerical party," writes an old friend of mine in Milan, "are furious at the thought they have lost their power over the men; the youth of our cities regard the priests with unutterable scorn. Little by little our women are emancipating themselves, that is, they are avoiding confessionals; they do not teach their children the catechism composed by order of the Church; still it would be exaggeration to say that the priests do not retain considerable influence over the weak—pardon me, the fairer sex; and the idea of their emancipation being erected into a system, puts our worthy prelates beside themselves with rage. Poor me! If some kind society had emancipated my sisters from their thraldom, I should not now be compelled, at my time of life, to be scribbling for my daily bread. You remember I told you that in 1848 my sister was enthusiastic for the National Cause, and that, kissing the medal of Pio Nono, she said to me triumphantly, 'Even you, my heretic, will become a faithful son of our Holy Father.' I said to her, 'Not only will your poor Pope not make Italy one, but when we shall have done so in spite of him, there will be an end of the Papacy, in Italy at least.' She burst into tears, and after a visit to her confessor never again showed the least enthusiasm for the Holy War. I was banished, as you know, for my share in the revolutionary attempts in 1853, and Austria confiscated all the property of all the exiles. I had previously made a feigned sale of my little all to my sister, and on the scarce income I have lived ever since. The other day my sister died; I went to reclaim my property. She had willed it to an old bigot! A mutual friend told me that she was stung by remorse on her dying bed, but that her confessor menaced her with eternal damnation if she put the power to do evil in the hands of a heretic, when Providence had graciously made her the instrument of rescuing it from his grasp. That the sale of the property was a mere feint to evade confiscation, and that therefore my sister has willed away property that was not hers, is not recognized by law; so behold me penniless, all because some kind society did not think sooner of emancipating women—(from their priests.)" While the Press and public is blaming and praising, the Society has opened its rooms to the subscribers to GARIBALDI's musket fund, and five of its members, Dr. GUISEPPE LEVI, DATE AUGUSTO CARGANICO, Dr. PIETRO CHIAPPONI, Dr. EZZIO CASTALDI and GASPARE STAMPA, all names of note, have formed themselves into a Committee for the purpose of canvassing Milan—avowing that they do not mean to desist until they have collected in that city above a million of francs. It was a happy idea of GARIBALDI's, that appeal. First of all it has curbed the frenzy for illuminations, fêtes in honor of Paul and Peter. The National Guard, the civic bands, instead of giving banquets to their officers, send the sum those banquets would have cost to the national fund. Three porters (facchini) bring eight francs. A child of eight years brings his three francs, being the result of cents. given him to buy fruit at breakfast. A doctor in Milan sends 140 francs given by his patients. Wounded soldiers from the Austrian army, in short all classes of citizens and friends, vie with each other in their patriotic offerings. MAZZINI sends his mite, with the following letter:

I send 200 francs as my contribution to the subscription proposed by Gen. GARIBALDI. I am sure that all those who are of the same political religion as myself, will hasten to subscribe. GARIBALDI's name is for us a pledge that these muskets will not serve solely to defend La Gattolica and the Mincio. THE SACRED UNITY of our fatherland, which would be violated by any plan that does not embrace the whole country, from the passes of the Tyrol to the Sicilian Sea, is his faith as well as our own. Arms are everything for us. It is needful that the Italians, by hastening to complete this subscription, should reveal their unalterable intentions; should put an end to the indecorous clatter of those cowardly optimists who expect a country and liberty from a lie spoken at Biarritz, or from a decision of hypothetical conferences held by foreign princes. G. MAZZINI.

It is clear that the Governor of Lombardy acted under the orders of Marshal VAILLANT in seizing the number of the Progresso containing his letter to the King—first, because it was not seized until the following day, and as all newspapers are carried to the office of the censorship, had the legal authorities disapproved they would have seized it at once; second, because in the act of accusation against the gerente, who is now in prison, only the sentences referring to the Emperor were underlined in red; third, because the Nazione of Genoa was allowed to publish a series of editions and sell them all without being molested. The letter, together with the author's autograph note, has been read by the King, and I have reasons for knowing that it has been favorably received by personages in high places. This is good; because, as the conditions on which the writer offers the aid of the entire Republican Party are clear and unmistakeable, i. e., the creation of Italian Unity by means of a frank and direct appeal to the nation, it would seem that this creation and this appeal have entered into the plans of the Government.

I see that some of the English papers, losing sight of the conditions, seem to think that the great Republican leader had compromised himself. Not at all; it is but a repetition of his famous letter to CHARLES ALBERT and to PIUS IX., the old Se non, non. If you will make Italy one we are with you, if you fall we are against you. The other day I was slowly mounting the hill that leads to my house, reading with great satisfaction an article on this same letter in one of the best newspapers of Turin, when I was startled by a voice behind exclaiming—"Alas, alas, we have fallen on evil times." I turned and recognized in the speaker one of the greatest philosophers and noblest patriots that Italy can boast; the soul of the five days of Milan, the most truthful historian of those eventful times—(C. C)—who from pure love for the Republican flag, and hopelessness at its present triumph has, with great loss to his country, withdrawn almost entirely from political life. He had been reading MAZZINI's letter, and said, frankly, that he disapproved it from beginning to end. He went through the whole history of the House of Savoy; told me how, up to 1821, Austria was despised in Italy; but how, owing to CHARLES ALBERT's desertion, and the consequent failure of SANTA ROSA, people began to feel that Austria was somebody and something, and how scorn gave place to fear and defiance to despair; then, he went through all the history of 1848, and traced the dismal story thence to the present hour—strongly blaming the Piedmontese Government for its grasping tendencies during the war, which he considers one of the chief causes of the peace of Villafranca. He is a Federal Republican; and as he does not believe it possible for an Italy to exist, save on the model of the United States or Switzerland, he cannot bear the idea of the Republican principle being placed secondary to the dogma of Unity.

"How can my poor people be educated in the true faith," he asked, "when the Republic is only preached on high days and holidays; if, when days of strife and trial come, it is to be laid on the shelf, and they taught to look to Monarchy for hope and help?" I give you this as the opinion of a great and noble patriot. Nevertheless, I think he is mistaken. When the Italians have got all Italy they can govern it as they please, and, anyhow, a nation, like an individual, must buy its own experience. No preaching, were the Angel Gabriel to fill a pulpit, would convince the Italians that King VICTOR does not desire to be King of Italy—will not use all his efforts to win the Italian crown. Were any now to preach that doctrine, they would be charged with having brought about the misfortune they predict. Time will prove.

PARIS GOSSIP.

French Caricatures of Mr. Ward in Peking—Peculiar Notions of Canada and Maine—Literature, Music and the Drama.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1859.

Charivari is having its own fun over the American Minister in China. It has published engravings three days in succession, which are the laugh of the town. The first one represents Mr. WARD on his way overland to Peking. In this engraving one sees only a large rough box mounted on an uncouth wagon, drawn and surrounded by a great mob of hooting, howling Chinese. Standing alone are two mandarins, or chief men, looking on. The landscape is composed of barren hills and plains. The reader need not be told that the American Envoy is shut up in the box, without the power of taking observations of the interesting country through which he is passing. The second engraving represents the arrival on the great square of Peking. The cavalcade is stopped, a board or two has been knocked from the side of the box, and a long, lank, clean-shaved individual, in a black dress-coat and with a bandage on his eyes, is seen bursting forth, much as a young chick bursts from its shell. Two mandarins receive in their arms the falling and blind Ambassador. The next engraving shows him in the palace before the throne of the mighty brother of the Sun and the Moon, delivering his speech. Jonathan stands as straight up in the middle of the floor as the monument on Bunker Hill. He is still in solemn black, and a close-fitting bandage over his eyes shut out the view of the Celestial world around him. A dozen of Mandarins are prostrated at his feet in a circle, and in this position the tableau reminds one of a fountain, with a very tall central jet surrounded at its base with a dozen low curvilinear ones. While the blind Envoy is sawing darkness with his arms, his mightiness on the throne is indulging in the interesting pantomime, so beloved by juveniles, of playing the "You can't come it!" movement with his hands upon his nose. This is Charivari's idea of Mr. WARD's pilgrimage to Peking.

The Patrie, ministerial paper, lately published a communication from one of its American correspondents, on the subject of the annexation of the State of Maine to Canada, from which I extract the following paragraph:

"It is a fixed idea with a majority of the people of the United States, that Canada wishes to throw herself into the arms of the Union. But this is only an illusion of the Yankees. When Canada shall decide to separate herself from England—and that day will come—it will be either to declare herself independent, or to annex herself to France, but never to be absorbed into the American Republic. On the contrary, while the Canadians, whether French or English, are not even dreaming of incorporation into the United States—they are too monarchical for that—the American State of Maine desires ardently to separate itself from the Confederation in order to annex itself to Canada. This extraordinary state of things is little known in Europe. The commercial interests of the State of Maine would gain by its annexation to our country, (France,) and its geographical position would render its annexation desirable for many reasons. Moreover, the people of Maine have a great deal of sympathy for the English, their former masters, and they love the French of Canada. In order to manifest in the most striking manner possible this double sympathy, the inhabitants of Maine propose to celebrate soon, with great pomp, the anniversary of the death of the two English and French heroes of Canada, WOLFE and MONTCALM, both killed in fighting on the field of honor. It is useless to say that this demonstration, attitude of Maine excites astonishment and indignation in the United States. The journals of New-York call the people of Maine 'Franco English maniacs.'"

There! you see how it is. One must go abroad to get news of his own country.

Within the year a book has been published at Paris which has had a singular fortune in the way of provoking other books. I refer to the bizarre work entitled Fanny, by M. ERNEST FEYDEAU—a work which it is to be presumed will scarcely find a man courageous enough to become its English translator. This work embraces but three characters, the husband, the wife, and a young man, the lover of the wife. The book professes to be a study, and all the talent of its talented author is spent in showing the exactitude with which a high-born woman can separate love from duty—giving the first to her paramour and the second to her husband. The lover is terribly jealous of the husband, and prohibits the wife from loving him. For this reason the wife is obliged, in conversation with her lover, never to mention her husband's name, and therefore designates him by the very impersonal but significative lui, (he, him.)

This new nomenclature seems to have suggested to Madame GEORGE SAND a new subject and a new title for a book, and accordingly the Parisians had scarcely ceased to read and to talk over M. FEYDEAU's book, when Madame SAND's Elle et Lui (Her and Him) appeared. This book made a great sensation, and being a little personal (toward the late lamented poet of the Academy, M. ALFRED DE MUSSET, it was immediately replied to in another book by M. PAUL DE MUSSET, brother of the deceased, entitled Lui et Elle. To this book Madame SAND has just replied, in the last number of the Revue des Deux Mondes, by a preface in which the eminent authoress permits the public to see how far she has been wounded by M. PAUL DE MUSSET's book. There is every evidence that this violent polemic, now advanced far beyond the limits of a literary discussion, will not stop where it is.

And now, here comes a third book, entitled Lui, this one from the pen of Madame LOUISE COLET, née REVOIL, sister of Madame COUSIN, and poetess laureate of the Academy. The book is full of curious revelations for those who know how to look through its lines.

M. MAURICE SAND, son of Madame GEORGE SAND, will soon publish a work entitled Masques et Bouffons, with a preface by his illustrious mother. M. MAURICE SAND joins to his title of author a remarkable talent in designing, and it is to him that is due as well the designs illustrating the works of his mother as those in his new book about to be published.

A singular event in the life of a great artist has just occurred at Madrid. You know that MARIO and Madame GRISI, unable to come to terms with M. CALZADO, of our opera, had taken for the Winter the Opera of Madrid, and had commenced giving representations. The first night Madame GRISI made her appearance was the signal for a storm such as would have done honor to a band of Septembriseurs dancing the carmagnole around their victim on the guillotine. All attempts at quelling the storm were ineffectual, and cries of "Fuera! fuera!" (Put her out!) "A la carcel!" (To prison!) drowned the director's explanations. And all this because the distinguished artist's voice was cracked, unmelodious, gone in fact. The public of Madrid had paid their money to hear their favorite operas well sung, and because the public of Paris and London were willing to accept GRISI's voice for the sake of what it had been, they saw no reason why they should, and they demanded the suppression of the illustrious singer's person to keep company with her voice. The process was brutal, but who can say that in principle the Madrilenes were not in their right? It is indeed pitiable to see such a talent sacrificing its reputation for still a little more of that which it has already plenty.

The success of Mademoiselle VESTVALI, whom we claim as an American, continues to increase at the Grand Opera here. She is now rehearsing "Herculaneum," to take the place of Madame BOSCHI-MAINO, who has passed the Boulevard to take an engagement with M. CALZADO, at the Italiens. Mlle. VESTVALI will hereafter take the first rank at the Grand Opera, a position which she was only able to conquer by real merit, for every one knows the prejudice of the French in favor of their own singers, and the incessant efforts they make to keep upon the boards of their first and official lyrical theatre none but French artists. I was glad to hear Mlle. VESTVALI declare formally that it was a mistaken notion that we had not the material for first-class artists in the United States. She says that, on the contrary, we have plenty of material, the voice, the talent, the action, the vivacity, and only lack one thing, the application to study. To make a good artist the vocation should be selected while the individual is yet young; they should be drilled in music and in the languages six, eight or ten years, giving up their whole time to the profession. Mlle. VESTVALI, who taught music as well as sang it during her residence in America, had good opportunities of judging of the capacities of the people, and she declares that their only impediment is their impatience, their "fastness," their too great a disposition to hurry into the realization of quick dividends. Mlle. V. sings with facility in seven modern languages; she attacked the French here for the first time, and when it is recollected that she had to appear on the boards of the Government school of France, the most important opera in Europe, before an audience the most critical in the world, and prejudiced always against a stranger, it will be understood what study and a determined will can do; for of twenty persons who make the attempt to sing at the Grand Opera, not more than one succeeds. They either fail at the official audition or appear at best but once or twice before an audience.

Mlle. MONROSE, of New-Orleans, who was educated at the school of DUPREZ in this city, and lately made her début at the Opera Comique, has at once acquired the first rank at that theatre. Thus far she has only appeared in one piece, Le Songe d'une Nuit d'Été, in which she plays the character of Elizabeth to MONTAUBRY's Shakespeare, but at each representation she acquires new laurels, and the critics, with one accord, place her upon a pedestal difficult to maintain for one so young in years and in her profession.

Mr. FAGNANI, of New-York, has just finished at his studio in this city a full-length portrait of the celebrated friend of BYRON, the Countess GUICCOLI, which is acknowledged to be one of the finest works that ever came from the studio of this painter of celebrities. Even at sixty the Countess, now the Marchioness of BOISSY, is a handsome woman, and shows all the traces of that remarkable beauty which captivated the heart and inspired the pen of the great poet. Mrs. FAGNANI has in her possession a small lock of BYRON's hair, presented to her by the Marchioness of BOISSY—a beautiful little curl set in glass and gold.

HUME, the well-known American rapping medium, has just passed through Paris, with his wife, on his way to America. He not only has not lost his power of evoking spirits, but has acquired new and more terrible power. Instead of confining his miracles to conversation and communion between the living and the dead, he now places living, but widely separated, friends in connection, and enables them to hold converse together. Such a power is very suggestive, and does not need to have its inconveniences pointed out.

A letter was lately sent from this city to New-York and a reply received back at Paris in three weeks, four days and nine hours. The Vanderbilt out and the Persia back were the mediums of transmission. In this connection it is the place to state that no change has taken place in the length of time between the arrival of the New-York mail at Liverpool and its delivery at Paris. The merchants and other business men here have a right to complain that the Department at Washington takes no step to remedy this evil. But four times since the Cunard line came into existence has the mail arrived in Paris on Tuesday morning, and these four times they were brought into Liverpool by the Persia early on Saturday morning. No matter whether the mail arrives in Liverpool on Saturday or Sunday, it never leaves London for Paris till 8 o'clock Monday evening. A traveler can come from Liverpool to London in five hours, and from London to Paris in twelve; but it still takes the American mail from sixty to seventy hours to get over the same road.

The American Legation in this city has been moved to No. 50 Rue de la Pépinière. The late residence of Mr. MASON has been occupied by Prince OUSOFF. MALAKOFF.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

No hope of her Transatlantic trip this Winter—Discussion among the Directors—Her Probable Movements.

From our Special Correspondent.

SOUTHAMPTON, Wednesday, Oct. 26, 1859.

Up to yesterday, notwithstanding the reports to the contrary, there was a chance of the Great Eastern leaving for America this Fall. It was strongly believed by some of the most influential Directors that she would be started out, passengers or no passengers, at once, for the purpose of an ocean test. If the Company were not in funds, there were offers of money enough to pay all the expenses. But yesterday a final meeting dashed these hopes. The fact is, that so long as the Board is at sea, the ship will stay ashore. With perhaps the exception of a few coasting trips, to show the vessel, there will certainly be no long voyages made till the Board is reorganized. The present Managers are not the true friends of the enterprise, and do not represent the sentiments of the heaviest owners. It will be fortunate, for other reasons, should some of them be turned out. Their utter disregard of public opinion and of the customs of civilized countries would drive away custom enough to fill a common ship. And their commercial ability is on record, not less in their whole course of action, than in the proceedings of the trial at Weymouth. The ship will be finished, the management will be Christianized, and then we may look for some worthy results of this noble enterprise.

It is believed that the ship will go to Southampton on the 31st. Moorings of a very permanent character have been laid down there, and since it is an excellent place for her to lie and to be completed, as well as an accessible and central place for a show, it is thought she will winter there. A trip to France, Spain, and about the Mediterranean, is talked of. This, should it occur, will develop no very important engineering or commercial facts. A North Atlantic voyage is the great test. The results of all trips, however, of any importance, will be reported directly to the Times.

TUBAL CAIN.

SPAIN AND MOROCCO.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

From the London Times.

Interesting news from Morocco was received by the Ripon mail-packet, which arrived at Southampton yesterday morning. Our Gibralter correspondent, writing at the moment of the steamer's departure (4 P. M. on the 18th,) says:

"We learn just now, viâ Spain, that the declaration of war against Morocco has been made."

From the Gibraltar Chronicle.

The rupture of pacific relations between Spain and Morocco is in all probability an accomplished fact. Letters from Tangier, written yesterday, state that it was expected the Spanish Consul would strike his flag in the course of the day. Mr. BLANCO DEL VALLE returned to Tangier from Algeciras on the night of the 16th, and was the bearer of demands which it was considered impossible the Moorish Government could admit. These demands are said to comprise a cession of territory adjoining Ceuta, so extensive as to include the Sierra Bullones, taking in Cape Negro in the direction of Tetuan and Apes' Hill, on the Straits. If this demand be persisted in, war is considered inevitable. No Sultan of Morocco could consent to such an alienation of national territory; and even were the Moorish Government to yield on this point it is considered doubtful whether war would be averted, since this concession would probably cost the Sultan his throne.

EXODUS FROM TANGIERS.

DEPARTURE OF THE FOREIGN RESIDENTS AND CONSULS—PREPARATIONS FOR WAR.

We subjoin extracts from a few of the communications that have been received:

TANGIER, Monday, Oct. 17.

We are no longer in uncertainty as to the intentions of Spain. The Sultan not being able to submit to the fresh demands of the Cabinet of Madrid, we can no longer doubt the issue of negotiations—this issue is war.

Another correspondent writes:

"The Europeans were yesterday actively employed in shipping their property on board all the available craft in the harbor, preparatory to embarking their persons this day. Her Majesty's steam-sloop Vulture and gunboat Coquette were at anchor, and it was expected the British Chargé d'Affaires would see all the subjects of his nation safely on board before embarking himself in one of Her Majesty's ships. The whole of the population of the city was in the greatest consternation, especially the foreigners, who were most anxious for vessels to save their property as well as their persons. The Moorish authorities put no impediment in the way of any of the Europeans who wished to take their departure, nor even did they interfere with the baggage or other articles which they were sending away. The foreign Consuls, with their families, attachés, &c., would, it was said, be taken on board the British and French men-of-war in the harbor. The Moorish Government were expecting to hear of the declaration of war which the Government of Spain had threatened them with."

Another letter of the same date says:

"Great consternation prevails in this city, and preparations on the part of a great number of Europeans and others are making to leave the country. Mr. BLANCO arrived here in a Spanish steam frigate; he remains on board, as the vessel is in quarantine. The Spaniards have asked officially for Apes' Hill. It is reported here that the Spanish forces will make an attack both by sea and land, and afterwards occupy Tetuan and Tangier. It is likewise said that Mr. BLANCO has demanded $5,000,000 to indemnify the Spanish Government for the expenses they have been put to in preparing the expedition. Yesterday being a Moorish holiday, a number of tribes from the District of Angera came into the town. In consequence of this EL KAYID requested Mr. DAUMMONT HAY to dissuade the Europeans from Embarking then, fearing it might give these tribes a pretext for committing excesses, if they observed the least sign of a commotion. Mr. DAUMMONT HAY, understanding these tribes would return to their homes in the evening, promised EL KAYID that he would delay the embarkation of the British subjects until this day (the 18th,) when he expected there would be a sufficient number of vessels to take off all the Europeans and others of the population who wished to avail themselves of the opportunity, especially as EL KAYID had instructed the Administrator of Customs to offer no impediment to those who wished to embark.

Mr. GEORGE V. BROWN, United States Consul, was preparing to leave for Gibraltar, bringing with him all his baggage, horses, &c.

Another letter speaks of MULAI ABBAS, brother of the present Emperor, being expected at Tangier with 30,000 men; and that our British Chargé d'Affaires will embark in one of her Majesty's ships of war, which remain off that port.

The troops in the neighborhood of Algesiras had received orders to prepare to encamp. A floating hospital, having room for forty patients, had been established at Algesiras. The Portuguese schooner Amelia arrived at Gibraltar on the 14th from Mazagan, which port she left on the evening of the 11th. Great was the discontent observable in that town among the few Europeans residing there, arising from the want of confidence on the part of a number of natives, who, it was firmly believed, were seeking some pretext or other to seize upon Government property. Grain from the interior continued to be imported into the market, and the vessels in harbor were loading as quickly as possible for fear of an outbreak. The letters from Mazagan also mention that the Governor of Azamor had broken faith with the Mazaganese. This is the more to be regretted because, in the event of any disturbance occurring in the town, the Government soldiers in Azamor will be prevented rendering any assistance, as they have hitherto been in the habit of doing.

ENGLAND AND THE MOROCCO QUESTION.

Paris (Oct. 26,) Correspondence of the Times.

A statement in the Nord, of Brussels, to the effect that a "very animated conversation" had taken place between the French Ambassador in London and Lord PALMERSTON on the affairs of Morocco, has caused much emotion here. According to the Nord, Lord PALMERSTON observed that England could not permit Spain to occupy both sides of the Strait; and would resist by force her attempt to do so, and, further, that the English Cabinet would consider the question as one of European interest. It adds, that the French Government, "while attaching a certain importance to the language of the Prime Minister, would not change its policy as regards Morocco, and would not the less continue to take all the necessary measures for the protection of the Algerian frontier against the attacks of the Moorish tribes." What amount of truth there is in this report of a conversation between Lord PALMERSTON and M. DE PERSIGNY I cannot say. There is, or was, a portion of the Nord at the disposal of the French Foreign-Office, and the Minister used to employ it for the communication of news not necessarily true, but which it was meant the public at home and abroad should take as such. The present information may, for aught I know, be of this doubtful character; but, whether true or false, it has produced a very unpleasant impression, and persons not easily alarmed began to be disquieted at the serious complications which might follow from this war. I am, however, positively assured that the Spanish Government has repeated its disavowal of the "

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Vanderbilt, which arrived yesterday, supplies us with correspondence and papers from Paris to the 25th, and from London to the 26th ult. The most important feature in the news is the growing distrust between France and England, and the popular conviction in both countries that a rupture is one of the possible events of a no very distant future. An article, emanating from a semi-official source, has been published in many of the Departmental journals of France, denouncing the foreign policy of England, and attempting to demonstrate her national decline. Such an article can be circulated with no other design than that of arousing in the minds of the French people their old prejudices against "perfidious Albion."

Another source of disquietude is the antagonistic attitude of France and England on the Morocco question. It is confirmed that Spain has declared war against Morocco; France is believed to have promised the former Power her support at all risks; and England is reported to be so averse to the war as to have declared to the French Ambassador in London, through Lord PALMERSTON, that she could not permit Spain to occupy both sides of the Strait. These rumors are, in a measure, contradicted by the Paris Correspondent of the London Times, who asserts that the Spanish Government has disclaimed all intentions of conquest, and that, upon such assurances, England has withdrawn her opposition to the war. According to the latest news from Tangiers, the foreign residents and Consuls were preparing to leave. Mr. Brown, United States Consul, was going to Gibraltar.

Various items of intelligence of an interesting character are received by this arrival. The London Times takes Commodore TATNALL's dispatch from the Pei-ho as a text for an article in which the British position in China is said to be fully justified. [illegible] Expedition to seek any possible survivors of the Franklin party was under discussion; but the Times and most of the London journals are opposed to a scheme so utterly wild and extravagant.

The Overland Mails from California, which arrived at St. Louis yesterday with San Francisco dates to the 14th ult., announce that extensive preparations were making for Gen. SCOTT's reception by the military, particularly by those once under his command in the Mexican war. Much excitement had been caused by the failure of CROPPENING & Co., the mail contractors between California and Salt Lake. Creditors had attacked their property, and it was feared that the mails to Salt Lake would be stopped. Business in San Francisco was dull. The water courses in the mining regions had become very low, and those fortunate enough to hold claims in the beds of the stream were rapidly washing out gold. Dates from Oregon to the 8th ult. report the successful progress of the Salt Lake and Fort Benton Wagon-Road Expedition. In British Columbia it was rumored that a new Governor, named HOWE, was soon to arrive.

The guerillas, under the outlaw CORTINAS, have had a new triumph over the people of Brownsville; and doubtless by this time the town has been captured and plundered. On the 20th ult. a party of thirty marauders entered the place and fired upon the inhabitants. A round of artillery, however, put them to flight; and elated with this success, the townsfolk resolved to carry the war into the camp of the enemy. With their great guns and smaller ones, they were on their way to the execution of the brave errand, when unhappily an ambuscade of the enemy surprised them, and, disordered and routed, they fled back to town. At the latest moment, CORTINAS, having sent in an ultimatum requiring unconditional surrender, was before the place, awaiting the determination of the panic-stricken inhabitants.

Advices from New-Mexico are only to the 26th of September, in consequence of the Northern route having been abandoned. Depredations by the Indians still continued. It was stated that a battle between the Utah tribe, assisted by Mexicans and a band of Arrapahoes had occurred at the crossing of the Del Norte. Twenty-two of the latter were reported killed.

A fatal explosion occurred on Lake Erie on Sunday morning. The propellor Ohio, bound to Buffalo from Cleveland, blew up when ten miles off Long Point, and sank in ten minutes afterwards. The second mate and wheelsman were lost, while the other fifteen who were on the vessel were driven about the lake for fifteen hours, when they were picked up by the propellor Equator, and taken to Sandusky.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, yesterday, an interesting debate grew out of a resolution offered by Mr. STEWART, appropriating $800 for the employment of 400 special policemen for duty at the polls to-day, in accordance with the request of the Police Commissioners. An amendment, calling upon the Commissioners to appoint members of the old police force, "as far as practicable," was offered by Mr. PURDY, but Mr. STEWART insisted that the word "convenient," instead of "practicable," should be used. Mr. PURDY would not agree to this, and the resolution, thus amended, was lost—Mr. STEWART voting against it. The Committee on Annual Taxes was directed to report what compensation should be allowed to the registrars and their clerks, and what rent should be paid for the places occupied for the registry of voters. The Board then adjourned to Tuesday next, when, according to law, they meet to canvass the election returns. The members of the Board of Aldermen had so much business to transact in connection with to-day's election, that they did not gather a quorum at the hour for meeting.

At a special meeting of the Police Commissioners active measures were adopted for guarding against disorder or riot during the election. A large special force has been sworn in to aid the regular Police, and strong detachments have been dispersed at prominent points of the City, to be in readiness if their services are required. The Supervisors failed to cooperate with the Commissioners by providing for the payment of an extra force. But Major-Gen. SANFORD has intimated his willingness to aid the authorities in preserving order by calling out the military, should their services be required.

There were 361 deaths in the City last week. Eleven of them were from violent causes, and 129 were from diseases of the lungs and throat. As compared with the deaths of the corresponding week last year, this is a decrease of 11. During the quarter ending with October, in the year 1857, there were 8,000, in 1858, 115 more deaths than during the same quarter of the present year.

The investigation into the alleged Washington and Centre Market extortions was renewed yesterday morning before the Mayor. Mr. IRVING's counsel denied the right of the Mayor to hold the investigation, or to meddle at all in market affairs, claiming that authority for the City Inspector, in whose bureau the abuses are alleged to have occurred. Mr. McKEON then read a large number of additional affidavits made by butchers who alleged that they had been defrauded in various amounts.

The sales of Flour amounted to 20,000 bbls., closing at steady rates. Wheat was more active, and desirable lots were somewhat firmer. Other kinds of Grain were depressed. Cotton was purchased to the extent of 1,500 bales, including 2,600 bales in transitu, at uniform rates. The principal sales of Coffee were 1,470 bags Rio, at 10¾c.@12½c. ℔ ℔. Week's receipts of Rio, 4,000 bags; stock, at the close, 43,742 bags. Sugars and Molasses were in fair demand, at unaltered figures. Provisions attracted considerable attention. Pork favored buyers. The movements in other branches of business were restricted.

The Moorish Question.

The intelligence that Spain has actually taken up arms once more against the Moors, might be received in ordinary times, by the rest of the world, with comparative indifference, or, at best, with a glow of purely historical and reflected interest. The picturesque annals of the long wars which ended with the triumph of the Cross over the Crescent at Granada, on the very eve of the discovery of America, might seem to stir again with sudden life at the news that Castile and Leon are marching once more against the heirs of the great Moghrebbin empire. And the curious in historical contrasts and coincidences might speculate upon the singular chance which revives under ISABELLA II., and carries boldly into Africa, the deadly strife which culminated in victory under ISABELLA I. on the soil of Europe. But for all the intrinsic importance of the conflict itself to the commerce or the politics of mankind at large, a Spanish expedition against the pirates of the opposite Barbary coast would have made itself no more felt and talked of beyond the Spanish borders ten years ago than a trial of strength between Portugal and Mozambique, or the Netherlands and the Sultan of Borneo.

It is not so now. The leading journals of Great Britain and the Continent comment upon the preliminaries of the approaching collision almost as earnestly as they could deal with the symptoms of a coming rupture between Russia and Austria or Germany and France. The question of Morocco has suddenly assumed the proportions of an European difficulty, evokes expressions of anxiety from the official journals of States apparently quite foreign to the quarrel, and makes itself felt on the money markets of Paris and London. In all this there is a meaning hidden, which is certainly not to be sought for in the Moorish question as it stands between the Christian kingdom and the Mohammedan empire immediately concerned, to which the United States as a great commercial nation cannot possibly remain indifferent; and which it is very important that we should neither underrate nor exaggerate. All Europe is not agitated with a vague indefinable apprehension of imminent mischief merely because Spain, after a few years of prosperous repose from the exhausting passions of civil war, finds herself strong enough to draw once more the sword of the Cid.

Spain has undoubtedly made most astonishing progress in wealth and enterprise during the last five or six years time. Since the year 1855, for instance, nearly 3,000 miles of railway lines have been put under construction in Spain; and more than one thousand miles are already open to traffic, and paying an average of nearly six per cent. interest on the capital invested. These works have been carried on by private enterprise; and the State, meanwhile, is drawing, not from the ordinary revenues, but from the demortization of the ecclesiastical properties, a sum equal to nearly $30,000,000 annually for eight years, which is devoted to the development of the post-roads, the naval and military resources, and the charities of the state. The income of the Government from taxes and customs has also been steadily increasing, the customs' revenue alone gaining between 1848 and 1857 an advance of more than 72 per cent. Facts like these indicate a very decided regeneration in the substance and heart of the Spanish nation, and may well entitle the movements of its policy to a degree of respect and attention from other Powers which the Spain of FERDINAND VII. could hardly have exacted. But they hardly presage an immediate renewal of the policy to which PHILIP II. gave his life. No one, probably, not even the apocalyptic Dr. CUMMING, who has been on the lookout for the "Great Tribulation" these ten years past, and has snuffed the battle of Armageddon in every political imbroglio since the last Revolution of Paris, can have begun to anticipate a new Spanish Armada as the result of the amazing vigor of the O'Donnell Ministry. It is true our British cousins were seriously exercised in their minds, last Summer, because Spain had ordered ten light-draft gun-boats, to be built in London; but this was a passing peril, and has long since been explained away. Spain and Spanish designs, put what construction upon them we may, are not at the bottom of the actual anxiety with which the expedition now arming against Morocco is watched by the Cabinet and the journalists of England.

Nor can it be safely assumed that the Moorish question has merely served as a natural vent for the gathering uneasiness and distrust which have been engendered in Europe by the delays and uncertainties attendant upon the settlement of Italian affairs. So long as the Italian Peninsula remains in what we may term its present condition of suspended organization, so long, of course, it will be impossible for any thoughtful statesman or observer to regard peace as permanently restored on the Continent; and so long every new movement of the Powers implicated in the Italian dispute, must be the signal for new doubts, alarms and inquiries. But the issue now raised between the Spaniard and the Moor, appears upon the face of things to be so thoroughly independent of all the matters debated at Villafranca, and left undecided at Zurich, that we must look into itself alone for an explanation of the emotion which it is awakening, and the attention it has received. In the extravagant language used upon this subject by the Tory Press of England, this explanation is not very difficult to be found. The organs of Lord DERBY and Mr. DISRAELI are naturally on the alert to discover any rising cloud on the political horizon which may promise to blacken the prospects and disconcert the plans of the Palmerstonian Government, and the London Herald has accordingly seized upon the Moorish question as involving a grave issue yet to be raised between England as the holder of military stations in the Mediterranean, and the African shore of the Straits.

Should this issue arise, the Herald warns England, and not unwisely, that Spain will hardly be left to assert alone her claims to dispute what the Herald coolly calls the rightful "maritime supremacy" of England in the waters which bathe the Spanish coast. The Ministers of Queen ISABELLA are informed that, if they attempt to occupy Tangier, Mogador, or any other portion of Morocco, they strike a blow at English interests, and may receive, in return, a "deadly blow at Cuba." This is the true "Moorish question," from the Tory English point of view; and that England, should she attempt to treat the matter from this attitude, would speedily find herself face to face with an antagonist more formidable even than the Spain of PHILIP II., may be sufficiently gathered from the tone of the French Press; and is more than hinted, in the remarkable semi-official article which we this morning publish, in a translation, forwarded to us by our correspondent at Paris. In this article the French people are prepared, by a succinct sketch of the treatment which NAPOLEON III. has received from England, for the possible refusal of France to recognize the right of England to be heard as a European Power on just such issues as this which the English Press has conjured up in Africa. If England declines to assist on European grounds in the reconstruction of Italian independence, it may fairly become a question whether she shall be allowed to plead European grounds for her retention of positions like Gibraltar, Malta and the Ionian Islands, to which she can advance no shadow of natural right; and still more fairly may it, therefore, become a question whether, in defence of those positions, she can be permitted to dictate to an independent State like Spain how far her arms shall be carried in vindication of her national honor and safety on the barbarian coast of Africa. This is the seed of mischief which sleeps at the core of the Moorish difficulty, and it abundantly justifies the deep concern with which the progress of affairs in that direction is now watched on both sides of the British Channel.

A Useful Fool.

Somebody, we see, advertises a lecture on "Fools and their Uses." That fools have uses, no man who has made up his mind to recognize a possible and mysterious good in such minor seeming evils as mosquitoes and the toothache, will hastily deny. Yet the lecturer's theme will not be easy of treatment, for among that proportion of any audience to whom the subject will be one rather of speculative than of personal interest, it is but reasonable to expect that nine in ten will have been so specially exasperated within the twenty-four hours next preceding its delivery, by one or another fool venting himself in one or another kind of folly, as to be quite incapable of appreciating his arguments in behalf of this tormenting class of creatures.

There is one point of view, however, in which a certain reciprocal utility may be instantly recognized by all men as obtaining between fools of various sorts and kinds, just as the farmer who refuses to believe in any final cause for crows or grubs, may be brought to admit a partial justification of the ways of Nature, when he finds the odious bird hard at work exterminating the more odious worm. For the benefit of this "intending" lecturer, then, and of mankind in general, we take pleasure in noting a very striking case of folly which reaches us in the last transatlantic mails.

Some extremely wise personage, whether King ALPHONSO or Lord BACON does not matter, and we cannot now remember, has recorded his conviction that a fool is never quite a fool till he has learned Latin and taken a voyage. Modern experience bears out the ancient saying, particularly in the point of fools on their travels. Send a common simpleton from America to Australia, from Australia to China, and from China to Britain, and he will return to you, like old Madeira thrice-ripened round the Cape of Storms, a sublime and extraordinary ass. Or catch some silly gossip of the hotels and spas, arm him with cards of introduction, and dispatch him on a tour of foreign dinners, and he will bring you back stories of such ravishing and demonstrative absurdity, that he shall seem to be a new creation, an addition like the Dogberrys and Elbjah Pograms of fiction to the world's types of human imbecility and extravagance. It has been our fortune here in America to enrich the earth with at least our fair proportion of fools of this sort; and we might be loth to acquiesce in the necessity of their existence, were we not now and then reminded, by some stupendous explosion of a correlative kind from over the sea, that there must needs be a balance in fools as in all things else, and that the traveled American twaddler is, after all, only the natural corrective of the traveled European blockhead. Our debtor's account on the score of trivial personal gossip and penny-a-lining social treachery must be heavy indeed if one COLLEY GRATTAN would not go far towards balancing the score; and in all the nonsense which American tourists, galloping at full speed from Liverpool to Cairo and back by St. Petersburgh to New-York in three months' time, have ever uttered on the subject of "monarchical imbecility" and "effete aristocracies," we can remember nothing more amazing than the facts and fancies of American life recently put forth to a listening crowd of lecture-loving British operatives at Bradford in Yorkshire, by a certain young Irish Peer, Lord RADSTOCK, who did us the favor to inspect our progress about a year ago.

A number of personages and persons, more or less eminent in English society, Lord BROUGHAM and Lord SHAFTESBURY, science and sanctity, standing at their head, assembled and met together the other day at this prosperous manufacturing town as the British Association for the Promotion of Social Science. One of the avowed objects of this Association is the encouragement of closer intellectual intercourse between the higher and lower classes of Englishmen; and its members, therefore, make it a duty to enlighten the common people in the most condescending manner on all sorts of subjects, and especially to impress upon the British workingman a due sense of the immense advantages of his position, and of the extreme undesirableness of anything like a revolutionary change in the relations of property to labor as at present established in the "freest country under the sun." To this end, accordingly, a soirée was given by the socially scientific luminaries to the light-seeking people of the factories, and at this soirée Lord RADSTOCK delivered himself of his American experiences with the object of convincing his hearers that old Yorkshire is an infinitely happier region than New-York. Of course his lordship felt bound to admit that the Yorkshire workman has his faults, and that his lot may in some respects be improved; but he assured the startled operatives that if every man who received wages to the amount of $120 a year would lay by about one-twentieth of that large sum every year, the seven hundred thousand laboring men of England might raise about $2,500,000 annually for the relief of the distressed among their number; and so all wrongs be righted without trouble or disorder.

At all events, if this very simple and feasible system were not adopted, the notion of looking to anything like the "Americanization" of England must not be entertained for a moment, since America was at this moment one of the unhappiest countries that could be imagined, one of the worst-paved, worst-lighted, worst-swept, and most heavily taxed communities that had ever existed. Lord RADSTOCK indulged in no vague general declamation. He had seen America, and spake that he knew. And he certainly made out a frightful case. In New-York, Lord RADSTOCK had a particular friend who had assured his lordship that every New-Yorker "enjoying an income of $500 a year, was obliged to pay $125 to have the streets swept!" Also, that the taxes in this City amounted to "twenty per cent. of its income." Also, that of the amount thus raised "$8,500,000 were annually left unaccounted for." Moreover, in New-York, and in Broadway, he, Lord RADSTOCK, had personally "sunk up to his knees in mire in attempting to cross the street." Moreover, he had "seen a hole in Broadway in the road, large enough to engulf the platform of the meeting he was addressing, with all who were standing upon it."

Now Lord RADSTOCK, who passed some time in this country, and particularly in the most Athenian City of Boston, no doubt believed all this wild rigmarole to be strictly correct. Those wretched Bostonians are perfectly capable of having filled his innocent mind with even more horrible pictures of the great metropolis. Still, as a man grown, and after nearly a year for calm reflection, Lord RADSTOCK must be held accountable for his crazy statistics and more crazy inferences; and can only be acquitted of a more serious charge, on the ground that he belongs to that class of well-meaning people who do more harm by their philanthropic and political zeal in jumping at conclusions, and catching up their facts on the flying leap, than half the malignant mischief-makers in the world are ever able to achieve. His lordship further attempted to put his hard-working hearers in love with poverty and boiled potatoes, by assuring them that in America he found that our "wealth had destroyed the power of self-control." However that may be, generally, Lord RADSTOCK's is certainly a special case to prove the occasional truth of the proposition.

Harper's Ferry in Texas.

It is not given to any man to be always fortunate. Mr. BUCHANAN has won for his Administration a high place in the military annals of mankind by the vigor with which he marched a large force of marines to drive the seventeen insurgents of Brown's band out of the great National Armory at Harper's Ferry, and rescue Virginia from that fierce Attila and his desperate array. He should, therefore, accept with fortitude the check sustained by his arms from the forces of CORTINAS, the Mexican guerilla, at Brownsville, in Texas. Why, by the way, should this name of Brown be so mysteriously mixed up with the Presidential career?

For now nearly a month, CORTINAS, a "lewd fellow of the baser sort," with a handful of reckless ruffians, has held Western Texas and the Rio Grande in a state of practical vassalage. He has, in fact, conquered that portion of the United States; and a dispatch, which we publish to-day, announces that he is on the point of extending his operations over a wider range of country. The United States military authorities in Texas have found themselves unable to cope with CORTINAS. He dashes across the river, levies tribute, demands the heads of obnoxious individuals, and finds his host daily recruited by men of the same sort who flocked to King David in the mountains. Brownsville in despair sends up her cry to New-Orleans, and while we are discussing the propriety of protecting Mexico, our own citizens are fleeing from their homes in fear of a knot of Mexican brigands!

The spectacle is not very flattering to our national pride; and if Mr. BUCHANAN has recovered from his delight in the victory won by his marines at Harper's Ferry we should advise him to dispatch those valiant men-at-arms at once to Texas. He need not be alarmed about his own personal safety; for though JOHN BROWN be not hung, we can insure him protection by sending him a few of those gallant New-York soldiers of whom the Courier and Enquirer, with so much delicacy, sense and patriotism, declares that a regiment will suffice to "whip" the entire South into submission to the Republican President, whom that journal proposes to put into Mr. BUCHANAN's place. In all seriousness, the actual state of things in Western Texas is beyond all expression shameful to the Government which so supinely permits it to exist.

A Municipal Police Force.

The Marylanders are, it is said, contemplating an infringement of the municipal rights of the peaceful city of Baltimore, by the formation of a police for its government upon the model of our Metropolitan force. As we have never hesitated to point out defects in the latter, wherever we thought we saw them, we can say with all the better grace, that if Maryland copies it, she will pay a well-merited compliment to its value. It is not such a Police as we might have, or as New-York has a right to expect, and in a variety of particulars is very much inferior to those of Paris and London; but it is immeasurably superior to anything New-York has ever had before. To know what it has accomplished for us, we have only to compare election days since it came into operation with what they used to be under the old régime, and to look back to the bloody riots which were once of almost weekly occurrence in certain districts of the City between clubs of blackguards very much resembling those of Baltimore, but which are now never heard of.

One thing the citizens of Baltimore may feel satisfied about, and that is that the old theory of municipal rights and municipal independence has not so far proved itself capable of being carried into the police of great cities. None of the largest cities of the world have attempted to adhere to it. Both in London and Paris the mass of the police force is in the hands of the State. To make it a thoroughly efficient guardian of life and property it has been found necessary to raise it above the distractions and corruptions of local politics, and to place its government in firmer and more powerful hands than those of the municipality. So far as we are competent to judge, the experience of the City has been in favor of the Metropolitan system. We have grown to be a people who require a police to keep us in order, and we are willing to pay for it. We are willing to pay it to all great centres of population which find themselves afflicted by rowdies and ruffians. The old municipal system is overthrown, because in troublous times it gave a security to life and property which men sought in vain outside the walls of cities. In our day, we are glad to say, everybody is as safe on his farm as behind his counter; and, besides, it would be a piece of ridiculous folly to let our heads and ribs be broken merely to vindicate our devotion to municipalities. In so far as the system is found wanting, it ought to be altered.

The Central Park.

The Commissioners of the Central Park announce that four miles of drive in the Park will be open to carriages and equestrians on Saturday next,—an invaluable boon to thousands who would both ride and drive if New-York had any place in which either could be done. The advertisement calls attention to the ordinance fixing the rate of speed beyond which ambitious proprietors of fast-trotters are not to be allowed to go; but we must express on behalf of the public an earnest hope that the Commissioners will not simply confine themselves to calling attention to the ordinance, but will take all necessary means for enforcing it. The rides and drives are to form an important feature in the Park—we were about to say the most important; but if the fast trotters are not held in check, it will be of no possible advantage to the public at large. The dangers of rapid driving on thoroughfares frequented by family carriages, containing ladies and children, and by no means so easy to manœuvre as light wagons, we need not descant upon, because everybody knows them. But in addition to this, the persons who devise trotting matches, and who trot them, and who love, and admire, and frequent them, are, we regret to say, not precisely the kind of persons who make a public promenade pleasant for the general public. Why there should be any connection between fast horses, and "drinks," and billingsgate, we are unable to say; but that there is a connection, is a fact with which the public is only too familiar. If the ordinance fixing the rate of speed be rigidly enforced, this class will find the Park-drives a great bore, and continue to confine their patronage to the Harlem Flats and the adjacent taverns, and leave the noble avenues which the Commissioners promise us to that portion of the people which takes its exercise soberly and decently, and can enjoy a good canter or a hard trot for their own sake, and without being gnawed by the desire to raise dust about somebody else.

We cannot help suggesting to the Commissioners, however, the possibility that, considering the nature of the nuisance we are denouncing, and the character of the men who are most likely to commit it, there is some danger that policemen on foot will not be able to prevent it. The remonstrances of an officer standing on the sidewalk, addressed to the occupants of wagons going twenty miles an hour, are not likely to have very serious attention paid to them. He can of course arrest them if he can overtake them, but, unless he is supplied with seven-leagued boots, we do not see how this can be accomplished, nor will the subsequent identification of culprits, wrapped up in great-coats, seen passing like an express train, be a very easy matter. Nor does anything we know of the New-York rowdy lead us to suppose that, upon hearing the voice of the ministers of the law, he will rein in his steeds descend, and submit.

We consequently beg to recommend the appointment of two mounted patrols for service in the drives and rides every day. Four horses would suffice to make them thoroughly efficient. They could keep constantly on the move in opposite directions; could run down any mounted or wagon-driving violator of the rules and bring him to justice, and would be useful in enforcing order in crowded portions of the thoroughfare. The powerlessness of a man on foot in the midst of horsemen and vehicles is a fact with which all are familiar, and the Commissioners ought to bear it in mind on the present occasion. Nothing will do so much to make the Park a success in the best sense of the word, as making it safe for families and men of quiet habits. The Police force already in existence has so far done its work admirably, but with the opening o the drives a new state of things arises, to which it is not competent, and with which, we fear, it would be hardly fair to ask it to deal.

AN IMPROBABLE QUAKERESS.—Some New-England journals, ardently addicted to literary Abolitionism, have already begun to put JOHN BROWN to profit, in the way of small sensations. One of them, for instance, has just published a letter alleged to have been addressed to JOHN BROWN by a sympathizing Quakeress of Rhode Island, together with a reply from JOHN BROWN himself. JOHN BROWN's reply may, perhaps, have been written by JOHN BROWN, for it is eminently characteristic, and even touching, in its rugged simplicity of phrase and feeling. But the case of the sympathizing Quakeress must certainly be commended to the attention of the Friends' Yearly Meeting. This anonymous Elizabeth Fry addresses JOHN BROWN as "you," in the worldliest style, and quotes SHAKESPEARE with a familiarity that must be fatal to her reputation as a disciple of GEORGE FOX. Our Boston friends must be more careful in future, and bear in mind the sage counsel of one of their own poets—always in their little fictions to keep "probability in view."

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Production of the "Sicilian Vespers."

Faithful to the promise of the programme and the "pledge" of Mr. ULLMAN, VERDI's new Opera "I Vespri Siciliani" was produced last night. The event was celebrated by an overflowing house, and by a degree of success which will in the end amply repay the managers for the very extraordinary expense they have gone to. It has happened somewhat unfortunately, we think, that the appetite for Verdi has been satiated this Fall by incessant performances of his works. The great point of the season being this new Opera, it would have been good management to have kept the public without any of the maestro's music until the "Sicilian Vespers" was produced. A failure might very justly be ascribed to lack of judgment on the part of the management in this respect; fortunately a success has been won, and VERDI is once more in the ascendency. To Messrs. ULLMAN and STRAKOSCH belong the praise of placing the work on the stage in a thoroughly admirable manner. There are few lyric establishments in the world where such completeness of detail and lavish magnificence can be enjoyed, or even expected. The scenery by Mr. CAIRO is most artistic and effective, excelling in warmth of tone the productions of Mr. ALLEGRI's brush, yet sharing with the latter all the minute delicacy of a correct and cultivated taste. The costumes of the principals are superb, and of the chorus, &c., picturesque and effective. Several imposing tableaux were warmly applauded, and really merited the satisfaction that was expressed.

VERDI composed the "Sicilian Vespers" for a Parisian audience, and indications of this fact—in the tendency to succession d'ensemble—are noticeable in all parts of the work. The original score is of inordinate length, and it has been found necessary, therefore, to shorten it, and to omit the ballet altogether. The excisions, amounting to about two-fifths of the entire work, have been made judiciously, by omitting mostly of repeats, which can very well be dispensed with. In the first act the knife has been wielded, perhaps, too freely. The opera opens with a short overture, by no means one of the principal themes is introduced with great elegance. It is not otherwise remarkable. A brilliant chorus of French soldiers follows, accompanied by a fine and melodious musical dialogue between Procida and Bethune, (very inadequately interpreted last night.) The soprano (Mme. Cozzoni) then sings a scena in which she endeavors by an allegory to incite the Sicilians to revolt. The cadenza of this piece is little more than a narrative, although [illegible] memorable; the allegro which follows appeals to the courage of her listening countrymen. It has been cut out, and as we before hinted, a cabaletta from another opera (Simon Boccanegra) substituted. From this point we tumble abruptly to the tenor's aria, "O tu Palermo"—a fine largo, which must inevitably become popular in spite of its want of shape. Why is it that VERDI always contrives to put into a monody more hours than are needed by the grammar of music? In this instance we have ten where eight would have sufficed. A duet between the tenor (BARTOLINI) and soprano is more remarkable for its singability than its excellence. The tarantelle towards the close of the act is extremely spirited, and is subsequently used with effect in connection with the chorus. While the dance proceeds the French soldiers take undue advantage of their position as conquerors, and carry off the bride of the dancers. This leads naturally to a demonstration of Sicilian feeling, and we have a curious chorus of revolutionary exhortation, introduced in a singularly sinister manner by VERDI. During its progress a barge, filled with people, crosses the stage, and a new chorus sings the burden of "Per l'aer s'avanza Fere, a good melody in six-eight time. The leaders of the Sicilian party also express their sentiments in a concerted piece, and thus the effect of the finale is secured. We have the chromatic mutterings of the outraged bridal party; the whispered satisfaction of the leaders at these mutterings, and the joyful barcarole of the unconscious marine excursionists. The effect is eminently pleasing and suggestive.

The performance was excellent, and the artists earned themselves palpably to insure the favor of the audience, but the success of this section of the evening was insured mainly by the scenery, and especially by the boat, which dazzled the eye with its brilliant lights. (Gas, we may here add, for our own satisfaction, was not known for lighting purposes in the Twelfth Century.)

Everything in the second act depends on the baritone (Signor VERGER,) between whom and the tenor occurs some exceedingly fine scenes. The music is mainly concerted, and without jealous analysis cannot otherwise be designated. The duet between the tenor and baritone is the theme introduced in the overture. It was excellently sung and nearly secured an encore. A bold adagio in B flat major, distinctly melodic, but not very original, furnishes a theme for the effective finale, all the voices singing it in unison with true patriotic fervor. In every respect the music of this act is superior to that of the first; and the audience recognizing so important a fact, warmed warmer and more generous, but was still somewhat lax in its duty. A finer scene than that presented in the finale has never been seen on an American stage. The first effect elicited a hearty burst of applause, and when the curtain had descended there was manifest satisfaction throughout the house. Signor BARTOLINI was scarcely equal to the opportunity afforded him in this act, but exerted himself about worthily. Fanny overcame the thing, and BARNABO was good without seeming to take the slightest interest in that accidental fact.

The third act is by far the best one in the opera, and almost every particular excels any of the earlier or previous works. We except from this general commendation the air for tenor Giorno di gioia, a slightly minor melody in VERDI's most nauseating style. The duet, "E dolce raggio," is certainly one of the most lovely conceptions that ever came from any pen. It possesses a degree of elegance which is very unusual in a quick movement by VERDI—his quick movements generally being vulgar and trivial. This is soul-uplifting and inspired. The dramatic situations are tremendous, and as a consequence we have some extremely felicitous combinations which culminate in the finale. Love, hatred and patriotism struggle for ascendancy, and mingled with these wild passions we hear the solemn tones of De profundis sung by a chorus about to proceed to the execution of the death sentence. The dramatic and musical intensity of this scene cannot be exaggerated. In grandeur of conception and skill of manipulation it far excels the famous Miserere of the "Trovatore."

The duet was not well sung, but secured nevertheless, a unanimous encore. Mme. Cozzoni lacked breadth of style, and her voice being deficient in the lower part, the best effects of the piece were necessarily denied to her. Signor BARNABO, too, appeared to be nervous and uncertain. Altogether it was a bad performance, and must be greatly improved before the exquisite intention of the composer can be realized. The finale with the De Profundis needs more rehearsing, but was given with a fair degree of fervor, especially by the chorus, which, we may here add, was excellent throughout. When the leading singers are more familiar with their parts this act will, we are sure, be received with tremendous favor. It is in every respect admirable and perfect.

The fourth act opens with a chorus of cavaliers, which bears a marvelous resemblance to a very familiar German waltz tune. This is followed by a brilliant bolero for the soprano; a show-piece which is intended to "bring down the house," and did so in an encore. It has a characteristic melody, and is remarkable only for a happy transition from the key of A minor, (in which it is written,) to that of A major. The tenor also has an air, [illegible] Zaffiretti, which is certain to become popular. It was sung admirably by Signor BARNABO. A fine duet and a hurried finale terminates the opera. VERDI is usually in a hurry towards the end of his work, and in this instance is remarkably brief and perfunctory. As far as it goes the act is good, but the end promises something more. This is, we presume, an inevitable defect where the catastrophe is a massacre. Shakspeare has not been more fortunate in the "Hundred Days."

There will be much diversity of opinion about the merits of this opera; but of its success last night there can hardly be a doubt. Brought out as a stock piece it will undoubtedly enjoy the popularity of a Trovatore. Whether it will afterwards become a prominent feature of the repertoire is a matter of doubt. MEYERBEER's operas can hardly be said to enjoy that distinction, and this work in more senses than one is after MEYERBEER. Compared with "Trovatore" or "Traviata," there is in "I Vespri Siciliani" a notable deficiency of melodies of the kind the public crave and VERDI heretofore has supplied. In place of these we have a well-balanced work, displaying much thought, and eminently distinguished for feeling. The concertos are generally good, and in the second and third acts immense. At least one-half the opera is better than anything VERDI has ever done, and the other half, if fragmentary, is enjoyable. The orchestration throughout is admirable, and displays more consciousness of color than we are apt to find in VERDI's works, and consequently greater discretion in its use. Signor MUSIO conducted the opera with marked ability.

LITERARY AND MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.—Miss M. A. BAKER, the Blind Poetess, who has recently returned from a most successful tour, will deliver her original "prose poem," called "Inner Life," at Dodworth Saloon, this evening. There will also be a musical entertainment, under the direction of her sister, an accomplished pianist. Miss BAKER was a pupil of the celebrated "Perkins Institution," and brings with her high commendations from the leading men of every men of New England.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

THE WATER DIFFICULTY PERMANENTLY SETTLED.—At a regular meeting of the Common Council, held last evening, a communication was received from the Water Commissioners, proposing terms for settling the existing difficulties between [illegible] the Water Contractors and the City of Brooklyn. In connection with the communication, Alderman DAYTON presented the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Board of Water Commissioners appointed under the act of February, 1857, have the consent of this Common Council to transfer to the permanent Board of Water Commissioners appointed under the act of 1859, the entire use, and management, and control of Baisley's Pond, and the several lands, structures and appurtenances west of the same, built under the contract of June 15, 1858, with H. S. Welles & Co., for the supply of water appertaining to the same; and the permanent Board of Water Commissioners are hereby authorized to accept such transfer, provided Messrs. H. S. Welles & Co. will execute and file with the City Clerk a transfer and surrender of all their rights and interest in said lands, structures and appurtenances, and in said supply of water.

Resolved, That in case the Board of Water Commissioners make such transfer to the permanent Board of Water Commissioners, and H. S. Welles and Co. transfer to the City of Brooklyn their right, and surrender the control of Baisley's Pond and the lands, structures and appurtenances of the Water Works situated thereon and westerly of the same, except so far as right of use and access may be necessary for their completion under the contract, and waive all damages against the City of Brooklyn by reason of non-payment of drafts—thereupon this Common Council give their consent to the Board of Water Commissioners to pay the Messrs. Welles & Co. (in addition to the amount paid from the moneys now held by the city as the reserve fund, stated in the ninth section of the contract of June 15, 1858,) as follows: $100,000 upon the transfer being made as specified in their resolutions; $150,000 upon the completion and acceptance of the engine, now nearly completed; $50,000 when the Water Commissioners shall deem the interests of the city secure on the premises thereof, and that the Comptroller be requested to pay the drafts of the Board of Water Commissioners thus presented, and discontinue the further litigation of the question.

Alderman KALBFLEISCH offered the following amendment:

Resolved, As a further condition of this body ratifying the contracts made by the Water Commissioners under the act of April 15, 1859, that the said Commissioners and said Welles & Co. agree with the City of Brooklyn that no other or further charges, increasing the cost of the Water Works, shall be made without the consent of the Common Council first had and obtained.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of [illegible] ayes to three nays. The resolution of Alderman DAYTON was then adopted by a unanimous vote, and was ordered to go into effect immediately.

Alderman DAYTON offered the following:

Resolved, That the Contractors be requested to start the engines and perform to the signing of the necessary papers. Ad

CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

THE OLD POLICE—SPICY DEBATE—NO SPECIAL ELECTION—PLAN FOR REELECTION—CONTRACTS FOR REFRESHMENTS.

The Supervisors convened at 3 P. M. yesterday. Three writs of mandamus, served upon the Board, the last requiring that the bill of Wm. F. Frost, for services as Marshal for taking the census in the Third Ward, Fourth District, in 1855, amounting to $125, be audited and allowed, and the two others requiring the issuance of warrants upon the property of the New-York Life Insurance Company, were referred to the Committee on Annual Taxes.

A communication was received from the President of the Board of Police Commissioners calling attention to the resolution passed by that Board, calling upon the Supervisors to appropriate $500 for the payment of 500 special policemen on election day. The Supervisor Purdy had no objection to making the appropriation, provided the men appointed were members of the old Municipal Police force. There was no reason why this should not be done.

Supervisor Sowams offered a resolution appropriating the sum called for, and

Supervisor Purdy offered an amendment respectfully recommending the employment of members of the old force, "as far as practicable."

Supervisor Sowams objected to any dictation on the part of the Supervisors to the Police Commissioners.

Supervisors Purdy and Brady subjected the management of the Police force and supported the amendment.

Supervisor Sowams withdrew his resolution and substituted a substitute providing for the appropriation of the sum, directing that not more than 500 special officers be appointed at $3 per day, and embodying the recommendation of Supervisor Purdy, except that the term "convenient" was substituted for "practicable."

Supervisor Purdy would not vote for it unless the original expression was used, and moved an amendment substituting "practicable" instead of "convenient."

Supervisor Sowams said he hoped the members would not vote for the resolution as amended.

Supervisors Bass and Purdy said that, as the Chairman of Committee on Police now opposed the resolution, they could not vote against it. And the resolution was lost.

Supervisor Brady moved its reconsideration, and the motion was carried.

Supervisor Blunt said he did not see what difference was made by an expression of opinion on the part of the Chairman of the Committee on Police. The Board, he considered, would now be adopting a resolution. Supervisor Bass said that, as the Chairman of that Committee, he was not prepared to know what the Police Commissioners required, opposed the resolution, he would also oppose it.

Supervisor Lawrence proposed that if the old Police were employed, they would be distributed judiciously in those districts where their presence would do the least mischief. It was almost impossible, at this late hour, to pick them out and appoint them.

Supervisor Tweed said he would bring a thousand good men before 9 o'clock to serve for $3 a day.

Supervisors Purdy and Sowams enlarged upon the difference between the words "convenient" and "practicable," and each insisted upon the adoption of his own phrase. It might be practicable, Supervisor Sowams said, for the Police Commissioners to send for and find 400 old policemen before the next day, but it would be exceedingly inconvenient. He charged that buncombe was at the bottom of Supervisor Purdy's action in this matter.

Supervisor Purdy denied the impeachment in emphatic language. It was unkind and untrue.

Supervisor Sowams retorted that the President of the Board should be the last one to use such language.

The vote was taken and the resolution lost for want of a constitutional vote. Supervisor Sowams still voting in the negative.

Supervisor Purdy offered a resolution directing the Committee on Annual Taxes to report what compensation should be allowed to the Registrars and their clerks, and what rent is to be paid for the places occupied for the registry of voters. It was adopted.

Supervisor Tweed was called the attention of the Board to the fact that the Supervisors were required by law to meet on Tuesday next at 12 o'clock, to canvass the election returns.

The Board adjourned to Tuesday next at 11 A. M., in order that there might be time to dispose of its regular business on that day before the prescribed hour for canvassing should arrive.

THE CITY MARKET EXTORTIONS.

EXAMINATION RESUMED BEFORE THE MAYOR.

The examination before the Mayor into the charges against the City Inspector, DELEVAN, and others connected with his office, for alleged illegal assessments upon the proprietors of the City market stands, was continued yesterday forenoon. Mr. Irving's counsel denied the right of the Mayor to interfere in Market affairs at all. Mr. McKeon then read a large number of affidavits, which he claimed connected the City Inspector's office directly with the transactions complained of, and urged that he should be held responsible.

Sale Kuscomen, with her husband, occupied stands Nos. 94, 97 and 98, in Centre Market, for the sale of fruits, eggs, &c. She swore the Kehoe, a butcher in the market, told the deponent she would lose her stands, but that he (Kehoe) could "fix it for her," as he was the best friend of the Superintendent; he told her the stand occupied by her (No. 94) was worth $200; she afterwards offered $150, but Kehoe said he "couldn't fix it for that." Two days afterwards deponent's neighbor, Mr. Nicholl, called on her with the clerk of the market, Mr. Toomey, and brought a permit for stand No. 94, and told deponent's husband to "clear out of the stand the next day, at 7 o'clock," as Mr. Nicholl was to take possession of that stand. Two days thereafter, Kehoe called on deponent and told her she would lose the corner stand, No. 97, unless he "fixed it" for her; she exhibited her permit, but Kehoe told her the old permits were not good, and promised to get her a new one, and also one for her daughter, for $300; deponent said she could not make her living without the corner stand; Kehoe gave her till next day to think of it; she then went to Kehoe's stand and offered him $50 first, and afterwards $100; the following day, Kehoe came and offered to get the two permits for $225, and appointed to meet deponent's husband the same evening, at 8 o'clock, at the tavern on the corner of Twenty-fourth-street and Third-avenue; deponent's husband, on returning from this meeting, said he had agreed to pay Kehoe $250 at 12 o'clock the next day; accordingly, Kehoe came to deponent and her daughter, Catharine Wallbrock, on the corner of Centre-street, near the market, and invited them to the office of the City Inspector; Kehoe asked, repeatedly, for the money in Centre-street, but deponent refused until she should get the permits; at No. 1 Centre-street, on the pavement, deponent paid Kehoe $250, which she had got out of the Bowery Savings Bank; the three then went up stairs where Kehoe saw Irving, and talked with him; Irving then told his clerk to write the permits, and, at the direction of Kehoe, she paid the clerk all the money she had left, $2, which the said clerk put in his pocket; Kehoe then told deponent and her daughter, if any questions were asked, to say that they had paid nothing for said permits.

Michael Kuscomen, husband of the last deponent, and Catharine Wallbrock, her daughter, swore to the same facts.

Carsten P. Garlick, No. 200 Centre-street, and doing business with Charles Wiltsen, stands Nos. 9 and 10 Centre Market, swore that they purchased their stands about a year ago for $1,500, and were allowed out of $250 by Kehoe, the money being paid him in a grocery store on Centre-street, under Erben's organ factory; Kehoe afterwards saw the Superintendent of Markets, and by Kehoe's direction, Messrs. G. & W. paid the clerks $5 apiece for making out their permits; the money was put in the office drawer; Irving signed the permits; an order was then made out by the direction of Irving to have a certain door opened which had been closed, to the great detriment of their business; Kehoe afterwards applied for more money, alleging he had made only $5 out of it.

Mrs. Depos, an aged French woman, had been transferred to another stand, and, with Catherine Halleck, had been obliged to pay $25 for new permits, and a fee of 50 cents to the Clerk for making them out; for $50 Kehoe offered to have her old stand restored, but it had not been done.

Engelbert Heelock, who has had a stand for seven years, was ejected from it on the 16th of September; his stock and fixtures being removed after the market was closed, by order of the Superintendent. Deponent applied for the stand again, but was repulsed and refused satisfaction.

Margaret Reckman paid $500 originally for stand No. 52 Centre Market, and was obliged to give $25 for a new permit. The money was paid in Centre-street, near Hester and Howard streets. They then went to the Superintendent's office, and the permits were made out. They gave 50 cents for each deponent as a fee to the Clerk.

Mr. McKeon remarked upon the injustice of robbing these poor people, and called upon the Mayor to see that the parties who had been wronged should have the money thus taken from them refunded, and their stands restored, or else, that the mischeaving officers should be turned out.

The Mayor replied that his jurisdiction in the case had been disputed; but he did not care in what capacity he acted, whether as Mayor, as a Justice, or as a man, he was disposed to have the investigation prosecuted. Copies of the affidavits would be sent to the City Inspector, in whose department these abuses are alleged to have occurred, and he would await his answer to the charges. He had no power to turn the offenders out of office. If the remedy lay in his hand he would settle the matter in five minutes.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

SPECIAL FORCE DETAILED FOR DUTY TO-DAY—NON-ACTION OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS—THE MILITARY HELD IN READINESS.

The Police Commissioners, at their special meeting, yesterday, took the necessary steps for preserving the peace during election day. In anticipation of the action of the Board of Supervisors, providing for the payment of four hundred special policemen, the Commissioners passed a resolution to place the same under the direction of the several captains of police, to be detailed, or held in reserve, at their discretion. The General Superintendent submitted his plan detailing the force as follows: At the City Hall Station there will be a reserve force of 50 men for the lower part of the City. In the Eleventh Ward 50 men will be in reserve, to be called on to do duty in any of the adjoining Wards, and 25 men in the Twentieth Ward. At Headquarters the entire detective force, and 30 men besides, will be held in readiness to move to any point where they may be required. The Superintendent submitted a list of the men who should have charge of the different election districts, both inside and outside of the polls. The special force has been considerably strengthened by detailing many of the doormen to active service during the day. The Chief Clerk, Mr. Embree, was quite busy yesterday, swearing in a special force for the occasion, from among their men as were recommended by the Captains.

Gen. Sandford, in answer to a letter from President Pelletier, as to how far he could rely upon the military, if occasion should require, to put down any formidable difficulty which might arise, signified his willingness promptly to cooperate in preserving the peace, and intimated that arrangements were made by which the several commanders could be instantly notified if they should be wanted. The latter precaution is of the more importance, as, after the adjournment of the Board, it was ascertained that the Supervisors had failed to comply with the request of the Commissioners to provide for the payment of a special force of four hundred men.

The Superintendent expresses no apprehension that anything will occur out of the ordinary course to disturb the peace, but he has deemed it prudent to take every necessary precaution.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

NO QUORUM.

At 5 o'clock P. M. yesterday, the hour of meeting of the Board of Aldermen, there were only five members present, and the President declared the session adjourned for want of a quorum to Thursday evening next, at 5 o'clock.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

POPULAR MOVEMENT FOR CITY CARS ON THE ELEVENTH-AVENUE.—A meeting of about two hundred persons convened at corner of Eleventh-avenue and Forty-second-street, last evening. The object of the gathering was to take action upon the delay of the Board of Councilmen in passing upon the resolution which passed the Aldermen in February last, authorizing the Hudson River Railroad Company to run small cars on the Eleventh-avenue. Mr. WM. O'BRIEN was appointed Chairman, and Mr. GEORGE WHITE Secretary. Speeches were made by these gentlemen and Mr. HUGH MURRAY, setting forth the imperative necessity for more traveling accommodations to the citizens of the West side of the City. It was intimated in very plain language, that the Committee of the Board of Councilmen having the matter in charge, had substantial reasons for knowing the cause of the delay, and that the proprietors of another City line knew very well what those reasons were. It was determined to appoint a Committee to confer with the Board of Councilmen; to exert all their influence against the election of those candidates inimical to the objects of the meeting; and to use all legal means to procure the running of small cars on the Eleventh-avenue forthwith. Mr. HUGH MURRAY, by way of showing that the meeting was not a political one, stated that one of the originators was a Black Republican, and another a "monstrous democrat." He thought Councilman JOHN VAN TINE, in his opposition to the measure, was governed by other considerations than those of public good. The meeting lasted but half an hour, but, with the aid of a band of music, a bon-fire, and general good humor, manifested considerable enthusiasm—and even attempted a proposition to tear up the rails of the Hudson River road, in case the small cars were not soon running.

STEAMER NEW WORLD.—The wrecked steamer New World was towed down yesterday by the steamers Dr. Kane, Satellite and Columbia, and taken on to the Jersey Flats, where the residue of the freight, furniture, &c., will be extricated previous to the vessel going upon the balance dock. Nearly all the passengers' baggage has been claimed and taken, and all damages paid. In regard to the freight the proprietors of the People's Line intend to adopt the same course as they did in their settlement for damages and goods lost by the sinking of the steamer Isaac Newton some two years ago. In that case, when owners of goods having receipts and bills of lading presented them to the Company for payment, the receipts were taken to the place where the goods were purchased and duplicate bills ordered, paid for and forwarded to the loser. The damaged goods were sold at auction by the Company and the avails appropriated.

LECTURES TO-NIGHT.—That funny gentleman, Mr. BE CORDOVA, will give the second lecture of his popular humorous course, at Clinton Hall, this evening. His subject will be "Open Air Industry"—in allusion to the petty dealers of the City streets.... "Modern Infidelity" is the topic with which Mr. *GEORGE W. CURTIS will entertain the Brooklyn Mer*cantile Library Association, at the Athenæum.... At the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, Rev. WM. A. BARTLETT is the lecturer. The Committee of the Plymouth Course has added a new attraction to the series. An orchestra of members of the Philharmonic Society will perform some of their best pieces for one hour before each remaining lecture, and also a piece to close each evening's entertainment.

THE ALLEGED BANK FORGERS.—Capt. WALLING and Detectives MCCORD and ELDER, arrived in the City about 12 o'clock last night, having in custody DAVID LEACH and ADOLPH BISHOP, the two alleged forgers on the Nassau Bank. Both parties were arrested in Boston on Wednesday last, and on examination were held as the parties who forged the check for $3,122, purporting to be signed by ROBERT BOWNE. They were locked up at the Police Head-quarters for the night.

NEW-YORK HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Committee of Arrangements submitted their report at the meeting of the New-York Horticultural Society last evening. It stated that the expense of the last exhibition amounted to $623 15. Of this sum $70 were awarded in special premiums. It was resolved to hold the next Spring Exhibition on the 18th of June, 1860. Exhibitions of productions in the fine arts and of small machines and models not larger than three feet square, were invited.

NEW-YORK UNIVERSITY.—At a meeting of the Council of the New-York University, held yesterday, the following gentlemen were elected members for the ensuing year: Rev. Gardner Spring, D. D., Hon. Myndert Van Schaick, Rev. Mancius Hutton, D. D., James Brown, Esq., Robt. L. Kennedy, Esq., Francis Hall, Esq., A. Oakey Hall, Esq.

DR. SCUDDER'S LECTURES.—The opening lecture of the course on India drew a crowded house at the Cooper Institute last evening. To say that Dr. SCUDDER afforded entire satisfaction would but half express the evident delight of his audience, who manifested their pleasure by frequent applause. The next lecture will be given on Thursday evening.

Coroner's Inquests.

THE DEATH IN ROOSEVELT-STREET.

The inquest upon the body of FREDRIKA MARCUS, who was found dead on Sunda morning op o site her own residence in Roosevelt-street, was held yesterday at the New-York Hospital by Coroner JACKMAN. Policeman MCCRACKEN, of the Fourth Precinct, who found the woman, deposed that he made inquiries, but could learn nothing which could explain the cause of her situation. LOUIS MARCUS, a brother of deceased, deposed to facts which have already been stated in the TIMES. He was ignorant of the occurrence until 7 o'clock on Sunday morning. Deceased was a single woman and about 25 years of age. Dr. HUNT, Physician of the Hospital, made a post-mortem examination of the body, but he was unable to determine the manner in which the fatal fracture of the skull occurred. The jury rendered a verdict that "Deceased came to her death from fracture of the skull, of the hands of some person or persons unknown."

TWO MEN KILLED IN WORTH-STREET.

Yesterday morning, THOMAS JOHNSON and FREDERICK MORGENSTERN, two stone cutters, who were engaged upon the new buildings in process of erection at Nos. 38 and 39 Worth-street, were killed by a large slab of marble falling upon them from one of the upper stories. Coroner TAYLOR, who investigated the case, found that the slab was not properly secured in its place. Morgenstern was warned of the insecurity of the stone by one of the workmen. The jury rendered a verdict accordingly.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT HIMSELF.

Mr. OTTO V. WELSH, a resident of Hoboken, who accidentally shot himself on Saturday under circumstances which have already been detailed, died in the City Hospital on Sunday morning. The case was investigated by Coroner JACKMAN, and the Jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

DEATH BY A FALL.

A little girl named CLARKE, living with her parents at No. 176 West Thirtieth-street, fell from an upper story window, and was instantly killed. Coroner JACKMAN held an inquest on the body.

Police Reports.

ALLEGED FORGERY.

Douglas V. Donnelly was charged with forging the name of Thomas W. Wilding, foreman of Eagle Hose Co. No. 4, to an invitation addressed to Merwin H. Brewer, to go upon a target excursion to East New-York, as a guest of the "Eagle Volunteers." Mr. Brewer being a candidate for the Senate from the Fifth District, Donnelly, it is supposed, expected him to pay liberally for the proffer of the political support implied in the invitation; but he only received a polite note declining the honor, and three orders upon a Grand-street hatter for three of his best hats. Donnelly imprudently boasted of his success, and was consequently arrested and locked up by Justice SUTTON, upon a charge of forgery, preferred by Wilding. There is no such company as "Eagle Volunteers."

BURGLARY.—James Finaly was charged with having entered the grating hold in the sidewalk of a new dwelling-house, Nos. 105 and 109 East Thirty-third-street, and, forcing open inner doors of the dwelling, stole several locks, a coat and an ax. He was afterwards arrested with the stolen coat on his back, taken before Justice KELLY and committed for trial.

LARCENY.

At the Essex Market Police Station, Justice SUTTON locked up a young man named William Turnbull, on complaint of Mrs. E. L. Wheeler, of No. 234 Henry-street, for stealing a jar of butter and other articles from her vault. Turnbull was held in default of $500 bail. Charles Miller was arrested on complaint of George Krementz, of No. 27 Canal-street, for stealing a quantity of clothing, valued at $20. He was arrested by Officer Knight, of the Tenth Ward, and committed in default of $500 bail. Martin Murphy, according to the complaint made against him, entered the premises of Mrs. Mary Mason, No. 446 Tenth-avenue, with felonious intent. Mrs. Mason, who was temporarily absent, surprised him by unexpectedly entering the house, and Murphy fled without his booty. He was pursued and captured by Officer Long, of the Twentieth Precinct, who carried him before Justice KELLY. He was locked up for trial. His accomplice escaped.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS.

Mr. McMasters on the Character of the Great Discoverer.

The Catholic Library Association held their quarterly meeting last night at their rooms, No. 600 Broadway. Mr. JAMES A. MCMASTERS, editor of the Freeman's Journal, embodied the results of much rare reading and industrious research in an improvised address, the purpose of which was to rectify certain historical villifications of the personal character of CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS. What had mainly contributed, he thought, to the neglect into which, for three hundred years after his death, COLUMBUS' name had fallen, was the imperfect appreciation of the value of his discoveries. It was only after these United States, that portion of the New World which was evidently the most dominating and influential, had declared their independence, that COLUMBUS' personal history began to be investigated. In 1825 NAVARRETE, an infidel of the Voltaire school, which believed in the virtue of no man, nor in the chastity of any woman, was retained by the Spanish *Government, not to vin*dicate COLUMBUS, but to construct the best possible plea for the gross ingratitude and injustice which Spain had practiced towards him. WASHINGTON IRVING and ALEX. VON HUMBOLDT, taking NAVARRETE as authority, had reiterated the charges against COLUMBUS of superstition and bigotry, of having compared his discoveries to the trick of breaking an egg and making it stand on its end, and of his having maintained unlawful relations with a certain lady of Cordova, BEATRICK HENRIQUEZ, the mother of his second son, FERDINAND, who was also his best historian. The lecturer met these charges in a very lawyer-like way, and in the course of his argument presented many curious facts, drawn from historical sources remote and uncommon. Among some of the most interesting details connected with the career of the great Genoese, he mentioned the fact that one of his crew was an Irishman, and that previous to his second voyage the Pope, at his earnest entreaty, issued a Bull appointing one BERNARD BOYLE, a learned and pious Franciscan, as Bishop to accompany him to the land he had discovered, which FERDINAND, the Spanish sovereign, ignored by appointing to the office another BOYLE, (Boil) a Benedictine, and but a poor sort of Bishop any way, for he was a courtier. This Boil gave COLUMBUS immense trouble, and by the first ship homeward bound sent on letters to FERDINAND asking him for God's sake to recall him, for, not knowing the language, he could be of no use where he was. It was otherwise with the Franciscans who accompanied COLUMBUS. They at once began to learn the native tongue, and in spite of countless obstacles, and in the face of innumerable perils, gave themselves entirely up to the conversion of the Aborigines.

*In summing up the character of COLUMBUS the lec*turer described him as a man called by God for the great mission of opening up this great Continent for the spread of Catholic faith and truth.

SIXTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT.—The contest in this District for Senator, is likely to be a very active one, and the result doubtful, with the chances decidedly in favor of W. DRAKE PARSONS, Esq., the Mozart Hall Democratic nominee. Mr. PARSONS is a well-known and highly respected citizen, and has the advantage over his Tammany competitor in having first been placed in nomination by his own section of the party. In order to secure harmony in the party, he has offered, over and over again, to withdraw in favor of any good citizen on whom all sections and interests could unite, his only desire being to secure the District. The Tammany interest, instead of meeting the other section in that spirit of harmony evinced by Mr. PARSONS and the Mozart organization, paid no attention to these repeated attempts at conciliation, but met in Committee a few nights since, and nominated a Mr. MCMURRAY, without even sending a delegation to the Mozart Committee—which was in session on the same evening, for the sole purpose of listening to any proposition that might be made for concentrating upon some one who would unite the entire strength of the party. Under these circumstances, and believing that he has done all that can reasonably be expected of him to effect a union, Mr. PARSONS is now resolved to remain in the field, and his well-known hostility to all speculative schemes for robbing the City, his determined opposition to such projects as a Broadway railroad, and all *similar plans for en*riching a handful of individuals at the expense of our citizens generally, makes him a most formidable candidate, and we have little doubts that his vote in the District will far exceed that of the Republican or the Know Nothing candidate, and also of his Tammany competitor—all of whom are understood to be in the interest of THURLOW WEED & Co.'s railroad schemes and projects. A vote for Mr. PARSONS, then, is a vote against speculators, robbers and schemers, and in favor of preserving and protecting the true interests and rights of the City.

The Governor of Montferrate.....Sig. FERRI
Procida, Chief of the Conspirators.....Sig. JUNCA
SECONDARY CHARACTERS
By Mdme. Morti, Signore Muller Rubio, Quinto, Zimmermann, Croner, Fiori, &c.
To give due effect to the numerous double choruses (French and Sicilian) the regular chorus has been increased to EIGHTY SINGERS.
THE GRAND ORCHESTRA will comprise
SIXTY-FOUR PERFORMERS, under the direction of
SIGNOR MUZIO.
Baton.....M. APTOMAS.
THE MISE EN SCENE OF THE SICILIAN VESPERS
has been perfected under the direct superintendence of B. Ullmann, who for the purpose has visited the principal European Opera-houses, and M. Dubreuil.
SEATS AND PRIVATE BOXES
for the second and third nights (WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY) of the Sicilian Vespers, may be had daily at the usual
TICKET OFFICES.

LAW REPORTS.

HABEAS CORPUS AND QUASHING APPS.

[Proceedings upon the Writ of Prohibition.

The People vs. Quimbo Appo.—The argument upon the General Term of the writ of prohibition in this case came on, before Justices Roosevelt, Ingraham and Sutherland, and was discussed at great length.

Mr. Stone for the prisoner, and Mr. Doyle for the People.

The following are the points for the prisoner, and in opposition to the writ of prohibition:

I.—The writ of prohibition is a remedy, nearly obsolete, never granted but as a matter of right, and never granted except in those cases, in which there is no other remedy.

II.—The Common Pleas Court has not the jurisdiction in this case to issue a prohibition to the Oyer and Terminer, for any matter that the Queen's Bench, in England, ever claimed to have a prohibition to the Common Pleas, or the Exchequer. The Court of Oyer and Terminer is the highest Court of criminal jurisdiction in the State.

IV.—If, however, it were conceded that the Supreme Court could issue a prohibition to the Oyer and Terminer, and by such prohibition could prevent the trial, it has not full jurisdiction, still it could not justly exercise it in this case, because the Oyer and Terminer has the power to grant the new trial, as it has power to grant the first trial.

V.—The power to grant new trials is an incident of Oyer and Terminer.

VI.—The Court of Criminal Courts of general jurisdiction have power to grant new trials, in cases of felony, has been a debatable question, and is so often in this country, that it is not now a debatable question. (Whart. C. L. 981-2-3; U. S. Dig. Crim. Law 651.)

VII.—The power of our Courts of Oyer and Terminer to grant new trials in cases of felony is also settled by authority.

VIII.—The objection that the granting of new trials in criminal cases would lead to frequent applications, proves nothing, since the possibility of abuse of power is no evidence that the power does not exist, much less is it an evidence why it ought not to exist.

IX.—If, the Oyer and Terminer, has the power to grant a new trial, at the same term, and before judgment, it has also the power to grant it at a subsequent term. The Court is a continuing one; its services are in terms.

X.—It has also power to grant the new trial after judgment.

These points were controverted at great length by the Assistant District-Attorney, who relied chiefly on the point that were such new trials to be granted and become general, it would be impossible to convict a prisoner and bring him to execution. Decision reserved.

Insolvency.

PURCHASES NOT MADE FOR FRAUD—SINGULAR TERMINATION OF A SUIT.

The Silver and Leather Bank vs. Daniel Barker.—This was an action on three promissory notes, amounting to over $1,000, indorsed by Daniel Barker, and claimed as insolvent's discharge under the two-thirds act, granted by Judges Morris and Brooks. The cause was tried before Justice Mitchell, in the Sessions Court. Mr. Lamoureaux, who appeared for the defence, introduced the discharge which had been obtained by other attorneys, and rested his case.

Mr. Dwight then appeared for the Bank, and introduced a paper which showed the following facts: That the notice of application for the discharge, ordered to be published in the State paper, was not published, but in another paper which had been introduced before the Commissioner of Deeds, showing proof of such publication, and that this had been used in a previous proceeding, and allowed to suit the emergency of the present case.

Mr. Gerstenbrock, the foreman of the Evening Journal office, was upon the stand, and testified as above.

Upon this state of facts, the counsel for the defendant moved for the case, and on motion of Mr. McCullough, the Court gave judgment for the plaintiff on the notes, allowing five per cent, besides cost, and ordered the papers to be sent before the Grand Jury, to investigate the charge of fraud.

Injunction upon a Railroad.

ACTION AGAINST THE NEW-YORK AND NEW-HAVEN RAILROAD COMPANY.

Robert Bowne vs. The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company.—This was an action against the defendant, before Injunction Reasons in the Superior Court, to recover damages alleged to have been sustained in March, 1855, by reason of the negligence of the servants of the Company. The complaint alleged that the plaintiff was driving a horse in Fifty-fourth-street, and as he was crossing the defendant's track, his wagon was struck by the cars of the defendant, thrown from his wagon, had his skull broken, his jaw dislocated, and was otherwise so injured that he has not since that date been able to do anything. It appears that he received no warning by the usual signals adopted on railroads, and demanded $5,000 damages.

The defence was that the injury was caused by the act of the Harlem Railroad, and not by the defendant, and that it was in consequence of the negligence of the plaintiff. The case is still on.

Lockwood, Lawrence & Crosby for plaintiff; Tracy, Boyce & Talmadge and Wm. C. Noyes for defendant.

Assault and Battery.

A SEVERE PENALTY FOR DUNNING.

Daniel R. Barlyte vs. James Hughes.—This was an action for assault and battery. The plaintiff says that, in August, 1858, in the Eleventh-avenue, between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets, he was assaulted by the defendant, knocked down, kicked and greatly injured.

The defendant said it was not so; that he did not knock and beat the plaintiff; that he only shook the plaintiff off when seized by the collar by him.

The plaintiff testified to the matters stated in his complaint.

The defendant testified that the plaintiff came to him and insulted him, because he would not pay a bill that he was not liable for; that the plaintiff then seized him by the collar, and said he was a dishonest man if he did not pay it; that he then knocked plaintiff down, and kicked him; that plaintiff got up and ran away slowly.

The Jury sent in a sealed verdict.

H. C. Place for plaintiff; Mr. Dewey for defendant.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT, CHAMBERS.—ROOSEVELT, J.

Page et al. vs. Wilkes et al.—Motion to vacate attachment denied; first, because it is too late after judgment and execution; and, second, because the evidence of the original residence in Connecticut is undisputed, whereas that of the alleged residence in New-York is vague and uncertain.

Petition of Schultz.—Order granted for confirmation of sale, &c.

INGRAHAM, J.

Matter of Whitehall-street.—Referred to N. Jarvis, Jr., to examine as to matters stated in petition and report.

Ex parte Hall.—Motion to open inquest granted on payment of costs of term and motion; judgment to stand as security.

Parmelee vs. Matthews, &c.—Motion denied, with $10 costs, and leave to renew on payment of costs.

The People ex rel. Stone vs. Van Voorhis et al.—Judgment affirmed.

Wheeler vs. Spencer.—Motion denied, with $10 costs, but with leave to defendant to renew on disclosing his defence and paying costs of motion.

SUPREME COURT, SPECIAL TERM.—SUTHERLAND, J.

Bogue vs. Bogue.—Judgment that the City of St. Louis has no interest in the real estate sought to be partitioned, and the usual decree for the partition among the other parties, the heirs at law. (See opinion.)

General Sessions.

BUSINESS OF THE GRAND JURY NOT PRESENT—SENTENCES.

The November term of this Court commenced yesterday, and, for an unusual occurrence on the first day of term, a quorum of the Grand Inquest was in attendance. But Judge Russell was of opinion that as the Grand Jury of the Court of Oyer and Terminer had not been discharged, it would be illegal to impanel another Grand Jury. He therefore discharged them till Tuesday.

Francis Reidy, indicted for burglary in the third degree, pleaded guilty to an attempt at that crime, in breaking out and stealing 750 cigars, worth four cents each. Sentenced to the Penitentiary for two years.

Joseph Patrick pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree. Judgment suspended.

Margaret Hendly pleaded guilty to obtaining a small quantity of goods under false pretences, and was sentenced to the City Prison for sixty days.

James McGrann was tried for stabbing John Burns with a knife, on the 24th of September, at No. 190 Twelfth-street. There appeared to be no cause of quarrel, and the evidence was so conflicting that the jury failed to agree.

Circuit Court of the United States—Northern District of Illinois.

Horace H. Day et al. vs. Cooley, Farwell & Co., Hoyne, Sawyer & Co., Barrett, King & Co., and Rosenfield et al.—These are suits brought by complainants for an alleged infringement of a patent for a certain process of manufacture of India-rubber goods.

A motion for leave for a preliminary injunction, which is resisted by defendants, who ask time to demur and answer.

It appears, by the bill and the exhibits and the affidavits therein annexed, that a trial upon the merits has taken place before the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, and that the defendants have obtained a judgment in their favor in said cause, by which judgment both the validity of the patent and the legal rights of the complainants to sue have been sustained, the bill shows a prima facie case for an injunction. Although the decisions of any other of the Circuit Courts of the United States is not binding upon this Court, yet it has always been the practice of the Courts of the United States, on the principle of amity, to regard the decisions of the Courts of other Circuits as establishing a prima facie case in favor of the right of the complainant to sue for infringement of a patent. If, therefore, this Court had any doubt in regard to the case made by the complainants (upon which point it is not necessary to express an opinion) the Court would with consider the judgment of the Circuit Court of Maryland as conclusive in controversy on subject, to entitle the complainants to a preliminary injunction.

If the defendants desire to contest the rights of the complainants, they can do so upon filing with the Clerk security in the usual form.

The motion of the complainants for a preliminary injunction will be granted as to all of the defendants who shall not, within ——— days, file a bond satisfactory to the Court, with the usual conditions for security and indemnity to the complainants.

PERSONAL.

Rev. John L. Girardeau, of Charleston, publishes a card in relation to his connection with the religious instruction of the colored people, and is very solicitous to be understood by his Southern friends. He recognizes the divine character of the relation of master and slave, and repels certain charges which have recently been made against him by the following declaration: "A slaveholder myself and believing that I have a Scriptural warrant for being so, how could I promulgate tenets which would contradict all my past associations, and be detrimental alike to the interests of my own family and of the community with which I am identified."

The Boston Traveller states that 11 persons in Falmouth, Mass., living within a circuit of three miles and a half, recently spent a pleasant afternoon together, whose united ages amounted to 807 years. The average of their ages was 81 years. Six of these persons were married couples. None of these three couples were ever married but once, and all were married in early life. The oldest of these 11 persons is 91, and the youngest 74 years.

Sir James Clarke, the eminent London Physician, has just retired from his office of personal physician in daily attendance on the Queen. He has had charge of the health of the Queen for 27 years, since her girlhood. Advanced age and ill health are the reasons for the retirement.

Thomas H. Rochester, Esq., who has been President and financial officer of the Rochester City Bank for 16 years, has resigned that office.

Hon. Solon Borland, who has been dangerously ill in Arkansas, is convalescent, and will soon resume his duties as editor of the Memphis Enquirer.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Dr. Bayne died at Galt, Canada, Nov. 4. He was one of the leading ministers of the Free Presbyterian Church, and exerted a very important influence over its affairs. A preacher of great power, he built up a congregation in Galt almost unequaled in numbers in the Province.

Madame Roger de Beauvoir has just died at the age of 36. When 12 years of age she made her début as Mlle. Dose at the Theatre Français. She was the authoress of several vaudevilles and operas, as well as of several novels; of the latter, one entitled Les Confidences de Mlle. Mars, is the best known.

Hon. James Curtis, formerly Mayor of Chicago, died in that city, Nov. 3. The Common Council attended his funeral in a body.

MONDAY, Nov. 7—P. M.

The Weekly Average of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, Nov. 5, 1859, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of Oct. 29:

Increase in Loans	$1,703,600
Decrease in Specie	1,020,033
Increase in Circulation	351,017
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	590,717

Including the Clearing-house operations of the week, which show the inter-exchanges between the Banks, and including, also, the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit, and also with the movement this time last season:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Nov. 6, 1858.	Nov. 5, 1859.	Oct. 29, 1859.
Capital	$67,734,600	$69,092,000	$69,033,800
Loans	126,606,493	120,118,037	118,414,428
Specie	26,237,355	20,928,242	21,248,975
Circulation	8,195,023	8,627,421	8,276,404
Gross Deposits	109,217,448	96,722,901	95,245,321
Exchanged	21,880,506	23,060,003	22,169,150
Undrawn	87,327,942	73,672,898	73,083,181
In Sub-Treasury	8,256,042	4,606,687	4,850,765

The Bank return is somewhat less favorable for the Specie average than looked for. The increase in Loans and Discounts will account in a good measure for the marked ease in the Discount market through the week. Part of the increase is owing to the accommodation afforded to the Banks of the interior, whose short collections against Produce forwarded to this market have been cashed to a considerable extent by the corresponding Banks here. The Circulation, as usual on quarter day, goes up several hundred thousand dollars. The Deposit line, it will be seen, is also lighter, and the daily exchanges through the Clearing House denote a more active movement generally through the Banks. The market for Money this week opens with a fair offering of paper by regular dealers at the Bank at 7 ⅌ cent. There is a demand from outside lenders for prime lists of indorsed bills for 4@6 months at the Bank rate, and fair names 8@10 ⅌ cent. Prime short acceptances, 30@60 days, are still done at 6 ⅌ cent., and in some instances a fraction easier. Demand loans to the Stock Brokers rate 5@6 ⅌ cent. There is only a moderate employment to-day, with an easy supply. The Exchanges for the Persia, sailing on Wednesday, opened to-day at 110@110¼ on London at 60 days, and 110¼ at sight for standard Bankers and 109¾@109¾ Southern Bank signatures or indorsements, and on Paris f.5.15@f.5.13¾ at 60 days and f.5.11¼@f.5.11¼ at sight. There is a fair offering of Merchant bills on London at 109¼@109¾. We hear of business, thus far, at 110¼ sight on London, at which a leading Banker is the drawer, and f.5.13¾ at 60 days on Paris, less the usual brokerage on French Exchange, at which one of the Continental houses is supplying the demand. No engagements of Bullion for the Persia have yet been entered. The shipment will be a moderate one.

The Stock Market opened weak at the early Board this morning, under a considerable pressure to sell for cash, and to put out time contracts in New-York Central and the Western Shares. And this feeling was increased at the Second Board in the afternoon, when the Bear account was materially enlarged, seller 10@30@60 days, at an average decline of nearly 1 ⅌ cent. on the Share list from the closing rates of Saturday. The speculative sellers construed the Bank return, as they had previously done the Foreign news, as likely to turn the market in their favor, and acted accordingly. At the same time the Bull support was not very decided, although buyers took Central with some freedom at 80, Galena at 72¼, and Rock Island at 62¼, toward the close of the day. Illinois Central was sold down, this evening, to 61 ⅌ cent., being a decline of 4¼ from the top rate, and 2¼ ⅌ cent. from the lowest sales of last week. In the afternoon, the price returned to 62¼ ⅌ cent. The business of the road in November, thus far, shows even a larger daily increase than in October, and we learn of nothing new in the finances of the Company to depress the stock. Panama Shares fell off ¼ ⅌ cent; Pacific Mail went up 1 ⅌ cent.; Hudson River down ¼@1 ⅌ cent.; Michigan guaranteed steady, and somewhat stronger than at the close of last week, and Michigan Central was also steadier than the general Western list. Toledo fell off about ¾ ⅌ cent. The corrected official earnings of October for both the Michigan roads show better than anticipated, being placed each about $16,000 ahead of last year by reason of the heavy increase on the fourth week of the month. Erie Shares steady at 7¼@7¾. The City Bank Shares are nearly all firm, partly on the improved business which they begin to show in their Discount and Deposit lines. In the State Stocks some heavy time sales of Missouris were made at a decline of ¼@½ ⅌ cent, while Tennessees advanced to 90¼ ⅌ cent. In Railway Bonds Illinois Centrals were done at ¼ decline; Eries were steady at 66 ⅌ cent. for Third Mortgage and 25 bid for the Convertibles. New-York Centrals were ¼@½ higher, and scarce. The general market left off heavy.

The figures of the Anthracite Coal Trade for the week and season, which we published this morning, shows an increased consumption of nearly twenty per cent. This fact is significant of the prosperity of our great manufacturing interest. Both the Iron and Cotton mills are nearly or quite up to the activity of 1856. A private letter from a well-advised source in Philadelphia, dated on Saturday, says that the Pennsylvania manufacturers are doing very well, and in the Coal region it is said that "for five years the prospects have not been so good: the orders for shipment are regardless of freights."

The details of the earnings of the Galena and Chicago Union Railroad, for the month of October, are:

The London Times of October 26, says of the trade of the United Kingdom:

"The Board of Trade returns for the past month, issued this morning, continue to offer the best refutation of the remarks occasionally heard of the dullness of business, the fact being that the trade of the country is on a basis so sound and so free from speculative excitement that it seems to go on with inexplicable quietude. The declared value of our exportations show an increase of £917,661, or 8½ ⅌ cent. over those of September, 1858, and there is also an increase of more than 5 ⅌ cent. over the high total of the preceding year. Cotton goods, owing mainly to the Eastern demand, still figure for the chief augmentation. The Bank returns are as follows:

	Sept. 24.	Increase.	Decr'se.
